HOUSE CHIEFS FIGHT BORAH'S SESSION PLAN

Idahoan Points to Bills Pending as Cause for Extra Meeting.

HOOVER TO OPPOSE CONTINUING MOTION

Will Not Approve Proposal to Carry Over Same Appropriations.

(Associated Press.)

Another advocate of a special session of the new Congress in the spring spoke a few words for it yesterday while administration leaders were counting the reefs ahead of the appropriation bills they must pilot to port to avoid one.

Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, said that aside from the world court, the bills to regulate motor buses, power rates, to revise railroad regulatory laws, the Shipstead anti-injunction bill and the export debenture plan furnished legitimate reasons for a special session.

The suggestion of several senators that a continuing motion on last year's appropriation bills be resorted to if a filibuster should be made against the supply bills to force a special session is not looked upon with favor at the White House. It was said yesterday President Hoover had no intention of asking Congress for such action.

Leaders Seek Hoover's Action.

Some Republican leaders in the Senate believe an assurance from the White House that no special session of the Senate would be called for the world court would prevent the necessity for a continuing motion and that the legislative jam would be broken.

Speaker Longworth said yesterday the same elements that would filibuster a supply bill would use like tactics against a continuation motion.

Chairman Snell of the House rules committee likewise said a special session would be unnecessary.

While Chairman Wood planned to call the House appropriations committee to hear the Agriculture Department on need for drought relief funds, the Democrats prepared to block any effort of administration leaders to appropriate less than the $45,000,000 authorized.

Byrns Wants Full Amount.

Representative Byrns, of Tennessee, the ranking Democrat on the appropriations committee, told Mr. Wood that a measure appropriating the full amount should be presented to the House January 5, when Congress reassembles.

The Agriculture Department advised Mr. Wood it would be better prepared to submit figures next week, and the chairman said he would offer a resolution to appropriate the funds so quick action could be obtained.

"If Secretary Hyde fails to request the $45,000,000," Representative Byrns said, "we are going to force it through both Houses anyway. The Senate and House agriculture committees held extensive hearings which justify the full amount. If it is not used in relief work, of course we will expect him to return it to the Treasury."

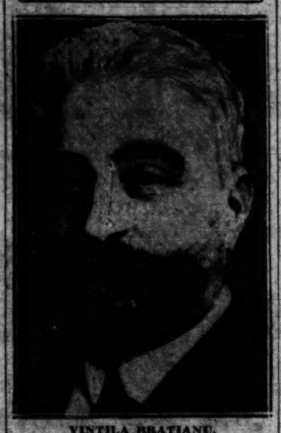
To Vote on Norris Measure.

Speaker Longworth said a vote would be had this session on the Norris measure to abolish the short sessions of Congress which follow elections.

He added he had been informed the conferees on Muscle Shoals were near an agreement.

The Vestal copyright and the Capper-Kelly resale price bill would be given early consideration, he said.

DIES SUDDENLY



VINTILA BRATIANU.

VINTILA BRATIANU DIES IN ROUMANIA

OPPOSED KING CAROL

Bucharest, Roumania, Dec. 22 (A. P.).—Vintila Bratianu, former premier of Roumania and one of the most prominent statesmen in Europe, died of apoplexy today on his estate at Mihaeti.

He and his even more famous brother, Jon, were considered the powers behind the throne of the late King Ferdinand and Queen Marie for years.

On the death of Jon in 1927 M. Vintila succeeded him as premier, and his enmity toward the present King Carol II increased. Previously he had been a leading figure in the acts which deprived Carol of the title of crown prince and banished him to exile.

He was elected leader of the Liberal party soon afterward and held the reins of office amid constant crises and rumors of crises for just one year. Then, following a difference between the regency governing for the boy king, Michael, he resigned and gave place to a national peasant party administration under Dr. Juliu Maniu. That the country welcomed the change was indicated by the overwhelming defeat of the Liberals at the ensuing general election.

Though retiring directly from public life, Vintila Bratianu remained a figure of great importance in Roumania, and thus in affairs of the Balkans and the yet larger area beyond.

After Carol had returned from exile last June, flying by airplane to capture the throne of his father, the national assembly by an overwhelming vote proclaimed him king and reduced Carol's son, Michael, to his original status of crown prince. Only one voice was heard in opposition, that of Vintila Bratianu.

Two months earlier he had caused a stir in the country by issuing pamphlets accusing the government

Roanoke Bandits Flee With $5,200

Holdup of Trolley Firm Employes Is Effected in Daylight.

Roanoke, Va., Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Three bandits held up two employes of the Roanoke Railway & Electric Co. near the company's office downtown this afternoon and escaped with $5,200, receipts for two days.

The holdup occurred at 2:15 p. m., and one man, who carried a sawed-off shotgun wrapped in cardboard, suddenly dropped the cardboard and yelled "Stick 'em up."

The messengers complied, while another man with a pistol grabbed three bags of money. The bandits jumped into a maroon-colored sedan and sped south. Police said the license tags on the automobile were stolen property.

Royal Family Meets In Bucharest for Talk

Vienna, Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Members of the Roumanian royal family are arriving in Bucharest for an important conference on family affairs, private messages received here today from Bucharest said.

The Dowager Queen Marie and Princess Ileana returned to the Roumanian capital today after a fortnight's sojourn in Belgrade. King Alexander of Jugoslavia, traveling incognito, is expected to arrive tomorrow to visit King Carol.

FORMER SMITH OFFICIALS FILE RETRIAL PLEAS

Counsel for Jailed Trio Will Seek Decision of Hitz Today.

JUDGMENT ARREST ALSO BEING SOUGHT

Would Halt Sentence Despite Jury's Verdict; Move Causes Surprise.

Fighting to get out of jail before Christmas, G. Bryan Pitts, C. Elbert Anadale and John H. Edwards, jr., former officials of the F. H. Smith Co., through their counsel, yesterday filed in the District Supreme Court motions for new trials and arrested judgments. All three were convicted by a District Supreme Court jury before Justice William Hitz last week on four counts of an indictment charging conspiracy to embezzle $5,000,000 of the company's funds and destroy records.

Following conviction, Justice Hitz, on motion of Nugent Dodds, special Assistant Attorney General, committed all of the men to jail pending sentence, and refused to fix bond for appeal, despite pressure by defense attorneys.

An hour later Attorney Harry S. Barger, on behalf of Samuel J. Henry, former president of the Smith company, and Anthony Sennes, former body guard for Pitts, filed two suits in which total judgment of $145,000 is sought. Both suits previously had been filed in Alexandria and were transferred here in order to get service on Pitts, whose address is given as the Washington Asylum and Jail.

Testified for Prosecution.

Henry, who was indicted with Pitts, Anadale and Edwards, turned Government evidence after obtaining a separate trial, and instituted his suit in Alexandria the day after the trio was convicted. He seeks to recover $120,000 which he says is due him by Pitts on a $240,000 loan he obtained. He said half of the larger sum was for the use of Pitts and that the former chairman of the board has refused and still refuses to reimburse him.

Sennes seeks to recover $25,000, claiming that amount was promised him by Pitts for assisting in obtaining an abatement of income tax assessments back in 1927.

At the time of the filing of the motions for new trial and arrested judgment relative to Pitts, Anadale and Edwards their attorneys, Wilton J. Lambert, Frank G. Raichle, R. H. Yeatman, Edmond Toland and George D. Horning, jr., gave the Government notice that the matter would be presented to Justice Hitz today. Assistant United States Attorney Neil Burkinshaw, on whom service was made, and who assisted Mr. Dodds at the trial, noted that the Government would contend for its right to two days' notice of such actions.

Motion Causes Surprise.

If this point is upheld, arguments on the motions will not be heard until January 2, in all probability, since the court officially adjourns today until that time. Special judges will be on duty every day during the recess except Christmas and New Year's, but Justice Hitz is not one of those specially assigned.

The motion for an arrest of judgment came as a surprise, since, if it is sustained, no sentence can ever be

Hope of Work Makes Jobless Easy Prey To Agents' Schemes

Dodge Introduced in Capital Whereby Firm Promises to Write Letters at 10 Cents Each to its Many Connections Draws Dollars From Ranks of Unemployed's Pockets.

By DANIEL B. MAHER.

No business prospect on earth is quite so weak in sales resistance as the unemployed man, with a few dollars capital, hunting a job.

This is the reason sharpshooting employment agencies succeed in selling all sorts of "rights" to the jobless for fat stipends—because the victim believes he is buying dollars for pennies.

One of the more profitable "rackets" that have become an incubus on depression is the "letter" dodge, a novel scheme, which was introduced here by an agency with offices downtown. Incidentally, this agency, which collected hundreds of registration fees from the unemployed, has not opened its doors in more than a week. Unfortunates who handed over their meager savings have unsuccessfully sought the owner.

The swindle was worked as follows: Want ads brought the prospect to the agent, who would then say:

"Our positions are all filled; however, we should be able to find one for you in a few days. It is a simple matter for us to let employers know you are on our list.

"We have contracts with the largest employers in the country. For instance, you are a bookkeeper. We will send to these merchants a complete list of your educational background. This, backed by our personal recommendation, will place you practically anywhere you choose.

"It costs 10 cents per letter, which is composed to fit your individual qualifications. For this small sum we compose the letter, and mail it to our contacts in the larger industries. Suppose I have 500 made for you? It will cost $50."

"But," asks the jobless man, "suppose I don't get a job. Do I get my money back?"

"Well, not exactly," is the answer, "but can you conceive of any possible chance that there will not be one opening in 500 firms? Sign here, please."

Invariably the job seeker fails, and so far as the victim is concerned, no more is heard of a job or his $50.

The agent fulfills his part of the contract by mailing out letters stating in brief terms the applicant's qualifications. Invariably the names are culled from telephone directories of other cities. Firms receive the letters who never heard of the particular agency.

It is estimated that the cost of mailing out these letters is from 3 to

MRS. DE BOSIS WINS ACQUITTAL IN ITALY

Writer for American Papers Given 15 Years for Anti-Fascist Acts.

TWO OTHERS SENTENCED

Rome, Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Mrs. H. J. de Bosis, American-born widow of the noted Italian poet, today was acquitted by the special tribunal for defense of the state of charges of anti-Fascist activities.

Renzo Rendi, an occasional correspondent for American newspapers, who was tried on similar charges, was found guilty and sentenced to fifteen years' imprisonment. Mario Vinciguerra received a similar sentence. Gelmetti, another defendant, was ordered to prison for three years. Three other defendants were acquitted.

No spectators without credentials were admitted to the courtroom, which was only half filled.

The prosecutor, Commendatore Dessy, in concluding the case, asked the court for mercy for Mrs. de Bosis. Although now legally free, it will require about two days to clear up the records before she can join her family.

She is the daughter of the Rev. Leroy Vernon, who died in 1896 and for many years was dean of the college of fine arts at Syracuse University.

Man Sentenced to Die Escapes From Prison

Salem, N. J., Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Squeezing through two ventilator shafts, Charles Fithian, 22, escaped from the county jail early tonight a few hours after he had been sentenced to die for the murder of William J. McCausland, in a pay roll holdup.

HEDRICK ACQUITTED BY JUDGE BROWNING

Supervisor of Arlington County Was Accused of Malfeasance.

WATER PLANT INVOLVED

Special to The Washington Post.

Culpeper, Va., Dec. 22.—Supervisor B. M. Hedrick, of Arlington County, today was acquitted of charges of malfeasance, misfeasance and gross neglect of duty in connection with the installation of water and sewer system in the Waycroft subdivision, of which he was a director. The decision was handed down by Circuit Court Judge Alexander T. Browning, of Orange, who was designated by Gov. John Garland Pollard to hear the case.

The case grew out of a petition filed early in June with Circuit Court Judge Walter T. McCarthy by the Organized Women Voters of Arlington County, asking that Hedrick be cited to show cause why he should not be removed from office. The case opened early in September, testimony being taken in the Arlington County Circuit Court.

The decision of Judge Browning followed three and one-half hours of argument by attorneys for both sides. The case was prosecuted by Attorney Burnett Miller, of Culpeper, and Commonwealth's Attorney William C. Gloth, of Arlington County, while Commonwealth's Attorney Wilson M. Farr, of Fairfax County, and Capt. Crandal Mackey, former commonwealth's attorney for Arlington County, appeared for the defendant.

In his decision Judge Browning stated that while he believed that there had been irregularities in connection with the payment and execution of the notes for the $9,175 in question, the testimony showed it had been due more to the large amount of work in the engineer's

KELLOGG RAPS RUMOR OF WAR FACING EUROPE

Statesmen Trying Hard to Avoid Conflict, Says Nobel Prize Winner.

LAND DISARMAMENT SEEN AS IMPORTANT

Soviet and German Fascist Situations Overstressed, Are Views Advanced.

New York, Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Frank B. Kellogg, former Secretary of State, world court justice, co-author of the Pact of Paris and Nobel prize winner, has faith this Christmas time that the world will continue to progress peacefully.

"No one is going to say there never will be another war," Mr. Kellogg said today, as he returned from The Hague with Mrs. Kellogg on the liner Bremen. "But I will say this. There never has been a time when the statesmen of the world have taken so many steps to settle their differences without war as at the present time.

"I don't think the present conditions in Europe indicate war at all. The responsible states of Europe are not talking about settling their problems by war."

One of the important problems confronting the world, Mr. Kellogg said, is land disarmament.

Hopes for Arms' Conference.

"I believe the allied nations are morally pledged to disarmament," he said, "and I have strong hopes the preliminary sessions at Geneva will call a disarmament conference within the next year or two."

He said he did not think the Russian situation, and the rumors of a great red army in process of formation, was militating against disarmament.

"I don't believe everything I hear about Russia," he added.

The recent German elections, with the increased vote of the Fascists, Mr. Kellogg does not see as indicative of a warlike spirit, nor, he thinks, should the fire-eating statements of some of its leaders be taken too seriously.

U. S. Campaign Speeches Cited.

"What if every country in the world would take our campaign speeches seriously?" he asked, and chuckled.

Mr. Kellogg had little to say about the award to him of the Nobel prize and evaded a question as to whether it marked an apex in his life, by saying he thought he was still a young man and had a lot to look forward to.

He and Mrs. Kellogg planned to go to St. Paul, Minn., their home, to spend the holidays. After that they have no plans. He did not expect the World Court to be in session again before next summer.

Mother Kills Children and Then Slays Self

Logan, W. Va., Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Sending one young son to a church to advise his two sisters not to come home, Mrs. George Cherepanick, 31, wife of a miner, shot and killed her two remaining children and herself today. The children slain were Michael, 13, and Charles, 3. The children at the church were rehearsing for a Christmas program.

The woman's husband, absent at work when the shootings occurred, could give no motive for his wife's actions. The bodies will be sent to the home of relatives at Carteret, N. J.

NYE IS SEEKING 'HIGHER-UPS' IN WAR ON NORRIS

NORRIS WITNESS

COL. WADE H. COOPER.

Progressives in Senate Demand Showdown on Lucas' Acts.

G. O. P. GUARANTEED LOAN HE NEGOTIATED

Capital Banker Describes 'Special' Account; Cutting Assails Methods.

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

The widely divergent Senate Republican factions rushed forward to a Roosevelt-Taft showdown yesterday as the Nye committee linked the Republican national committee with the secret campaign made against Senator Norris by Robert H. Lucas, the committee's executive director.

Wade H. Cooper, president of the Commercial National Bank, testified that the $4,000 note which Lucas had testified he gave the bank with which to pay for circulars, posters and pamphlets, part of which were circulated against Norris in Nebraska, was guaranteed by the national committee.

On top of this Lucas issued a statement last night reiterating that Norris had to leave the party. Denying there had been anything improper in his fight against the Nebraskan, he said "Norris' conduct has given rise to a condition which amounts to a growing cancer in the vitals of the Republican party and it must be cut out if the party is to survive."

"Special" Lucas Account.

Cooper testified that on October 28, five days after Lucas had ordered the literature printed by the Independent Publishing Co., Joseph M. Nutt, national committee treasurer, placed a $40,000 account in the bank available to himself and Lucas. On December 3 last, Cooper continued, Lucas negotiated the $4,000 loan, and he, Cooper, exhibited a letter signed by Lucas as executive director saying the national committee guaranteed the loan.

The national committee has another account in the Commercial National Bank, Cooper testified, but the $40,000 was deposited as a "special" account for Lucas.

Lucas had testified that the fight against Norris was his own personal matter, financed by the personal loan.

Cooper said that only yesterday Lucas sent him his personal check for $520 to be applied against the note, due January 2, and asking for an extension on the remainder. Lucas explained, Cooper said, that he would probably be out of the city when the note came due.

Senator Nye promptly made known that Treasurer Nutt would be summoned after the Christmas holidays and an exhaustive inquiry made of the entire $40,000 fund.

Lucas' Right Questioned.

In the meantime, both Senator Cutting, of New Mexico, and Senator Norris himself asked what right Mr. Lucas had to say whether a man is a Republican or not, and it became apparent that this is the issue on which the whole matter is to turn.

"The trouble with the gentlemen whom Mr. Lucas represents," said Mr. Cutting in a most caustic statement, "is that they fail to remember that the Republican party does not belong to the President of the United States, the national chairman and a few dozen members of the national committee. It belongs to the Republican voters. It is not a part of Mr. Lucas' official functions to determine whether the Republican voters are right or wrong. The Republicans of Nebraska decided in the primaries that Senator Norris was a good enough Republican for them."

Norris said:

"Even Mr. Lucas, in the depths of his dishonorable conduct, has not claimed that my nomination as a Republican candidate was not obtained honestly, fairly and legally."

Cutting and other Progressives were prepared to make the fight on the question of Norris' Republicanism, who is to be the judge of it, but Nor-

SHEPARD CONVICTED OF POISONING WIFE

Life Term Is Recommended for Army Specialist by Kansas Jury.

WILL SEEK NEW TRIAL

Kansas City, Kans., Dec. 22 (A.P.).—A Federal court jury today found Maj. Charles A. Shepard, 59, guilty of the poison murder of his second wife, Zenana, and recommended life imprisonment.

The physician, whose love affair with Miss Grace Brandon, blonde stenographer of Brooks Field, San Antonio, Tex., had been bared during the long trial of the case and alleged as the motive for the crime charged, wept silently when he heard the verdict.

His composure regained, he said presently that he was surprised at the verdict, adding: "I am absolutely innocent and this case will eventually be thrown out of court."

C. L. Kagey, of defense counsel, said he would move for retrial listing 30 to 40 citations of error in the trial. If a new trial is not ordered, he said, he will appeal the case.

"The verdict," said Kagey, "was apparently a compromise. If Maj. Shepard actually murdered his wife, he should be hanged for it." To this the major nodded assent.

The major, court officials said, will remain at liberty under his $25,000 bond until February 2, when he will be sentenced formally at Topeka, Kans., unless further legal action intervenes. He planned to leave tomorrow for Denver to report for duty at Fitzsimmons General Army Hospital.

In the trial, the Government alleged that the physician had planned carefully to remove his wife by a slow poison which would make her illness appear natural. His purpose, it charged, was to gain his freedom so he might marry Miss Brandon.

It produced witnesses who said that examination of the viscera of Mrs. Shepard had shown death was caused by mercury poisoning. It

Clearing House Would Stop Daily Gambling on Figures

New York Institution, Displeased at Misuse of Bank Statements, May Make Announcements Weekly or Monthly.

New York, Dec. 22 (A.P.).—There was no Christmas cheer for the gambling world in the report today that the New York Clearing House contemplates stopping the daily announcement of exchanges and balances.

The prosaic figures that are posted at 11:30 a. m. daily on a blackboard in the lobby of the clearing house building have lost their significance to the financial community, but are the basis of one of the most widespread gambling rackets in the country.

Thousands try their luck in the lotteries conducted in New York and many cities throughout the country. They play for high stakes, attempting to guess the first three numbers in the announcement, or whatever combination is designated.

The clearing house is understood to have become displeased over the misuse to which the figures have been put by the gambling element and now intends to make only a weekly or monthly announcement. At one time the figures had a certain value to the "street," but since growth of the Federal Reserve the daily clearing figures have become of academic interest.

The clearing house is expected to make an announcement, probably tomorrow, of its plans for 1931.

There is seldom a day when persons holding lottery tickets do not communicate by telephone, mail or in person in trying to obtain the daily figures from the clearing house. There have been instances of vain efforts to bribe newspaper reporters to get the figures in advance or to have prearranged figures published.

Newspapers have been harrassed frequently. When the posting is made employes of lotteries are on hand to telephone the figures quickly to booking agents.

The gambling schemes vary widely. Some have tickets for 10 to 25 cents, and others range as high as $1 and $2 for a chance. Bookmakers have been known to offer to pay 540 to 1 if the numerals are guessed correctly.

"Bookies," whose purses have grown fat on catering to the gambling instincts of countless thousands, are understood to be undismayed by the prospect of being deprived of the numerals. The suggestion was made that they might substitute the numerals on freight cars or something equally accessible.

Calvin Coolidge

Says: When trade declines and goods begin to accumulate, whether they are raw materials or farm or factory products, instead of letting the market take its own course there is always a great temptation to try some artificial remedy. Of late this has run to the device of having the public Treasury assume in some way the burden of absorbing the losses of those who have suffered.

It is the duty of the Government to provide highways and waterways. Under this head shipping may be assisted. Sometimes war or a great catastrophe requires the extension of credits. But local government must relieve the needy. In the general field of business, whether of industry or agriculture, Government interference in an attempt to maintain prices out of the Treasury is almost certain to make matters worse instead of better. It disorganizes the whole economic fabric. It is a wrong method because it does not work. It is better for every one in the end to let those who have made losses bear them than to shift them onto some one else. If we could have the courage to adopt this principle our recovery would be expedited. Price fixing, subsidies and Government support will only produce unhealthy business.

Post's Assistants Start Work of Spreading Cheer

Santa Claus Letters of Postoffice Given to Toy Fund.

Spreading joy throughout the Capital, The Post's Christmas fund is now in the process of distribution to a number of agencies which will send workers into every nook and corner of the city to see that each needy child has something for Christmas.

Yesterday's compilation of returns shows an additional $67.20 for the fund, making a grand total of $2,585.32 to be spent in furnishing "merry Christmas" for boys and girls who might otherwise have had nothing Thursday morning.

In addition to the acknowledgment of this $67.20 from kind friends of the fund, The Post wishes also to acknowledge receipt of $42 from the Lewis Hotel Training School, which was received and counted in an earlier statement of the fund, but inadvertently omitted from the list of contributions.

So popular did The Post fund become that the local postoffice began sending all its Santa Claus letters to The Post. By this means a number of additional needy families were discovered and their names turned over to the proper agencies to see that

NEWS of SUBURBAN Washington and the Surrounding States

ris placed the emphasis of his statement on the methods pursued against him. He termed Lucas' statement of Sunday night as an "adroit attempt to detract from his own ridiculous and indefensible position."

"I have not demanded his resignation and do not intend to do so," Norris said, reiterating that he had no objection to any one opposing him but that he wanted his opponent to fight in the open.

Referring to Lucas' statement that one of the documents he sent into Nebraska was a letter to show Norris' "insincerity" on prohibition, the Nebraskan declared the letter, purporting to be from a Tammany organization to a Nebraska Democrat, was a "fake on its very face." The Tammany organization purporting to sign the letter did not exist, Norris said. He repeatedly asked why Lucas fought him in the dark.

Answering Norris' statement last night Lucas said:

"Senator Norris' statement is simply a repetition of the statement made by him on the floor of the Senate last Saturday. He persists in distorting the facts. He concedes I had a right to oppose him and to contribute to the anti-Norris Republican organization of Nebraska, but he insists that my contribution was not made in the proper way.

"Takes Pride in Treason."

"The campaign literature which I furnished to the anti-Norris Republican organization of Nebraska was ordered from the Independent Publishing Co., through its representative, Mr. Charles I. Stengle, a former member of Congress and who is at present the editor of the National Farm News. The literature was sent by express to the headquarters of the anti-Norris organization at Lincoln, Nebr. There was no secret about this transaction. I deny emphatically that my opposition to Senator Norris was anything but proper.

"The Republicans of this country have never been satisfied with Senator Norris' methods in politics. He seems to take great pride in his treason and treachery to the Republican party. As an example: The Republicans of Nebraska in 1928 favored the nomination of Herbert Hoover as the Republican nominee. Notwithstanding this, Senator Norris, who had previously been elected as a Republican to represent the Republicans of Nebraska, made speeches for Gov. Alfred E. Smith, the Democratic nominee, and voted for him in the November election. And, although President Hoover carried Nebraska with more than 147,000 majority in that election, Senator Norris has viciously and relentlessly opposed the President's administration.

"Senator Norris condemns in the severest language my small contribution to the Anti-Norris organization in Nebraska, while he seems to delight in his own shameful record of treachery to his party extending over a period of years. His conduct has given rise to a condition which amounts to a growing cancer in the vitals of the Republican party, and it must be cut out if the party is to survive."

"Higher-Ups" Are Blamed.

Cutting voiced the opinion of other Progressives that Lucas is making the fight for "higher-ups" when he referred to "the gentlemen whom Mr. Lucas represents," and again when he said the "responsibility for Mr. Lucas' action lies higher up, considerably higher up."

"Mr. Lucas is not a personal issue," Cutting said. "He is merely an employe of the national Republican committee."

"The Republicans of Nebraska decided that Senator Norris was a good enough Republican for them," he continued. "He thereby became the regular Republican nominee, and was entitled to the same undivided support from the national committee which Mr. Hoover received in 1928."

Describing the literature circulated by Lucas as "scurrilous, false on its face and unworthy of the meanest ward healer in the land," Cutting took up the editorial in The Post yesterday saying Norris had sought to make the Republican platform "a lie and a fraud."

"What was the Republican platform?" he asked, then explaining that it called for equality to the farmer he declared that was what Norris had been trying to bring about but that he had received no assistance from the regulars, and that the platform also called for an anti-injunction bill, which Norris was endeavoring to get through over the obstacles of the regulars.

White House is Silent.

The Progressives as a whole look upon the disclosure as part of a general fight which they think the administration made on the Progressives last November. They think Senator McMaster in South Dakota, and Schall in Minnesota, were also victims of it. McMaster was defeated and Schall just did slip through.

Some of the regulars, on the other hand, were quite convincingly willing to go along with the administration if it wants to have a showdown with the Progressives, while others expressed the private opinion that ultimately Lucas would have to be the goat.

Cutting in his statement said that others had dictated the Lucas statement of Sunday night, and said they were serving notice that those who "dared" to differ with their views would be opposed.

"This," he said, "constitutes political thuggery," adding:

"No party organization can survive such a basis. If Mr. Lucas' statement is not immediately repudiated by those higher up, it means that the National Republican organization has ceased to exist."

Both the White House and Lucas insisted the White House knew nothing about his statement of Sunday night which read Norris out of the party.

As to what the White House intends to do—for the time being it intends to treat the matter as something for the national committee to handle. Mechanically, it is solely the business of the committee, but it is only a matter of time before the White House is bound to be drawn definitely into the dispute.

Committees' Treasurer Unaware of Lucas Loan

Cleveland, Ohio, Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Joseph R. Nutt, treasurer of the Republican national committee, tonight said he had no knowledge of a $4,000 loan made by a Washington bank to Robert H. Lucas, executive director of the committee into whose activities in the Nebraska campaign against Senator George W. Norris, the Senate campaign investigation committee is inquiring.

Nutt said that the committe kept a special account at the bank with a deposit of $40,000. It consisted of "certain monies which have always been properly accounted for," he added.

CHURCH BUYS K. C. HALL

There is no course better to follow in the solution of our economic and social problems than that guided by the spirit of the lowly Nazarene, Secretary of Labor William N. Doak declared last night at the Silver Spring community Christmas tree celebration. The Secretary pressed the button which illuminated the large Christmas tree erected by the Silver Spring Lions Club in front of the Silver Spring National Bank.

"May we enter, therefore, upon the celebration of this joyous holiday season in the real spirit of brotherly love, transcending the dissensions of the past, and with a firm resolve to carry forward that spirit to the New Year throughout the years to come," Secretary Doak said. He expressed himself as glad to be able to extend the greetings of President Hoover to the gathering.

Secretary Doak was presented to the more than 300 persons present by Representative Frederick N. Zihlman, of Maryland. Robert L. McKeever, vice president of the International Lions Club, presided. Christmas carols were sung by the gathering, led by the Rev. Ralph Smith, of the Silver Spring Methodist Episcopal Church. The benediction was pronounced by the Rev. William L. Moody, rectorof the Silver Spring Episcopal Church. Carols also were sung by the Lions Quartet, consisting of Joseph Weber, Herbert Parker, Edwin Warfield and Arthur Brady.

Secretary Doak at a dinner meeting of the Lions Club, held prior to the community celebration, declared that the keynote of his administration will be the attempt to achieve industrial peace and that he hoped to bring about better understanding and cooperation between employer and employe. He stated that all alien gangsters will be deported by the Labor Department where it can be accomplished without conflict with the courts. Capt. Frank L. Hewitt, president of the local club, presided.

No opposition developed at a hearing held last night on the petition of Mrs. Susan B. Howland for rezoning of the tract of land north of the Griffith & Perry coal dump in Silver Spring from residential to industrial. It is probable that the application will be approved today by the board of county commissioners at its meeting in Rockville. Mrs. Howland was represented by Attorney George H. Lamar, of Rockville. The hearing was held in the office of County Commissioner Lacy Shaw, in charge of the Silver Spring area.

Two suits for absolute divorce were filed yesterday in the office of the clerk of the circuit court at Rockville Through Attorney Bowie F. Waters, Leonard F. A number of improvements are planned, which include enlargement of the church and rearrangement of the pews and lighting. It is expected that the drive will be started soon to obtani funds for the establishment of a parochial school.

The Knights of Columbus and the Catholic Daughters will continue to use the basement.

The Potomac Electric Power Co. has registered a protest against the granting of a permit to Dr. Upton B. Nourse and other citizens for the erection of poles and wire and to serve electricity to the communities of Travilah and Dawsonville neighborhoods.

The protest was filed by Attorneys S. R. Brown, of Washington, and William H. Talbott, of Rockville, and H. A. Brooks, head of the commrecial department. The Washington corporation contends that it can serve the communities better and is willing to extend its service as soon as the necessary consumers are signed up at a cost of $13,000, of which the interested citizens are expected to post $3,000, to be refunded as soon as the patronage warrants. The commissioners may act on the petition today.

Cleveland Gets Air Races for 5 Years

National Body Fixes Event in View of Necessity to Show Profit.

Cleveland, Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Conductors of the national air races announcedtoday the annual event will be held in Cleveland for the next five years, and possibly five years additional. In the past, the races have been held in various parts of the country, a different city every year. The importance of conducting the races at a profit, which is used for the advancement of aviation, was the deciding factor in the establishment of semipermanent headquarters.

Profits were realized on the races when held in Cleveland, Chicago and Spokane, but not in seven other cities where they were held.

Senator Hiram Bingham, president of the National Aeronsutic Association, said the central location of Cleveland, in an area of large population, with demonstrated civic interest and capacity to handle the races successfully, made it the choice. L. W. Greve, president of National Air Races, Inc., which conducted the 1929 races here with $100,000 profit, said the races will be held the week or 10 days ending with Labor Day because weather conditions then are generally the most favorable.

Student Presents Bride To His Father at Capitol

Luther Steward, Jr., Weds One of Classmates at North Carolina.

LUTHER C. STEWARD, JR.

Luther C. Steward, jr., is a student at the University of North Carolina, the son of Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, and psychology is among his studies.

Saturday night, when the fate of the recommendations of President Hoover anent salaries for Government employes hung in the balance, young Luther sought out his father in the Capitol and said that in view of the Wood amendment and things he realized it was, perhaps, not the psychological moment to tell him, but he wished to present Mrs. Luther C. Steward, jr.

The announcement revealed a romance which began in classes in the university. Mrs. Steward, jr., was Charlotte Arme O'Mara, of New York.

The two met in the psychology class. They were married in Pittsboro, N. C., on December 2, but kept their marriage a secret until after their college examinations. Both passed with good marks, and when the Christmas holidays came they took a train to Washington to break the news to the father of the bridegroom. Then they boarded a train for New York to tell Mrs. Steward's parents that her name no longer was O'Mara.

Messages received from New York showed plainly that the O'Maras were just about as surprised as the senior Steward had been, but whether or not love is blind, almost every bride marries a glorious hero—the new Mrs. Steward said she was confident her family would like her husband as much as she did.

Mr. Steward, the younger, is studying personnel problems in college. He will be 23 years old in January. He will not be graduated from the school of commerce of the university until this spring. Neither will his bride finish her studies at the university till then. They are going to complete their college careers together.

Rubbing Alcohol Kills Mother of 9

Swallowed Part of Fluid in Soft Drink, Sheriff Is Informed.

Special to The Washington Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Dec. 22.—Mrs. Martha J. Dove, aged 42, wife of Charles J. Dove, and the mother of nine children, died suddenly late last night at her home near Linville, apparently from drinking the mixture of an alcoholic rubbing fluid and a soft drink.

Sheriff Charles R. Fawley was called to the scene, but he reported that, so far as he could ascertain, no criminal offense had been committed. Dove and a companion, Mike Turner, told the sheriff that they came to Harrisonburg yesterday and purchased two pints of the fluid and several bottles of soft drinks.

Dove and Turner, according to the sheriff, said that they and Mrs. Dove drank some of the concoction. Both bottles were empty when the sheriff arrived at the home.

Law Group Plans To Hasten Report

Members Agree to Give Up Part of Holiday if Found Necessary.

(Associated Press.)

Intensive activity for the final lap of its labors to produce a prohibition report for President Hoover was decided upon yesterday by the Law Enforcement Commission.

Members of the committee agreed, if necessary, to sacrifice a part of the Christmas holidays to finish the task as early in January as possible, perhaps by January 1.

A majority of the more weighty decisions to be included in the report still await decision, however, and it could not be said last night whether the final showdown would come today or be postponed until next week.

Under present plans, if argument becomes protracted over points arising, the commission will hold either a night meeting of a brief session Wednesday to keep up with its schedule. If it does not lag behind the program, however, the commission will recess late tomorrow afternoon, probably until Monday, when the final drive will begin.

Madrid, Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Maj. Ramon Franco, Spanish aviator, a refugee in Portugal since his abortive attempt to start an uprising in Spain, held a share in the ticket winning the fourth prize in the Spanish lottery held here today. The prize is worth 1,000,000 pesetas (about $100,000).

The ticket was owned by a cigarette vendor in a cafe. He sold shares in it to Maj. Franco, Maj. Reyes, another flier, and several others, including his own brother. The original owner said he did not know how much Franco would get for his share, but that it would be "plenty."

New German Note Is Sent to Poland

Alleges Ill-Treatment of Nationals as Result of Recent Ballot.

Geneva, Dec. 22 (A.P.).—A new note from the German government concerning alleged ill treatment of German minorities in Poland, was made public here today. It asserts that since the recent Polish election campaign the position of the German minority has grown materially worse, particularly in Pomerania.

The note says that anti-German outrages have become more and more frequent and that Germans have been severely hampered in the exercise of their electoral rights. Among the cases cited is the action of Polish authorities in the district of Graudenz, where, on November 16, it is alleged, the entire German voting list was declared invalid, involving the exclusion of 30,000 German votes.

The protest has aroused interest in League of Nations circles, as the complaint is made under the treaty for the protection of minorities concluded between the allied and associated power and Poland June 28, 1919. Previous complaints have been brought under the Geneva convention of May 15, 1922, concerning Polish Upper Silesia.

CITIES COOPERATING TO AID UNEMPLOYED

Golf Links, Swimming Pools and Other Municipal Projects Speeded.

U. S. PROGRAM IS LARGE

(Associated Press.)

Reports reaching the President's emergency employment commission from all over the country are that cities are accelerating their construction program for parks, municipal playgrounds and other recreational facilities.

Pittsburgh is building a new $150,000 swimming pool. Duluth, Minn., is laying out a new municipal golf course. San Francisco is proceeding toward a municipal bond issue for city improvements. These are typical of reports received from scores of towns where similar action has been taken, or is being considered.

The suggestion that farmers do necessary repair work this winter was made by the commission yesterday, and with it went a warning to the unemployed against wandering in search of work.

Estimates were made at the White House that $600,000,00 would be spent in public improvements during the fiscal year. Previous estimates had placed expenditures for Government construction for the calendar year 1931 at $700,000,000.

The Treasury Department made pubicl figures showing the status on December 1 of the present authorized public building program of $530,00,000.

Excluding the $40,000,000 authorized for land in the District of Columbia, it included 94 buildings completed at a cost of $31,661,362; 92 projects under contract at an estimated cost of $69,768,948; bids received on 33 projects to cost $14,518,971; 85 projects with an estimated cost of $45,575,648 given to the Supervising Architect of the Treasury; 24 projects with a cost estimate of $116,592,000 assigned to private architects; 12 projects, costing $4,166,741 whose sites have been acquired but plans not completed; 55 projects costing $23,081,300, where title is awaited; 23 projects costing $23,100,100 where the land is under condemnation; 78 projects costing $39,788,000, with reports in but sites not yet selected 31 projects costing $7,122,800 where the agents are inspecting the sites but have not reported; 1 project costing $85,000 where preliminary data is being collected; 8 projects costing $2,320,000 held up temporarily for various reasons.

The Treasury said it was evident it would be able to complete the present authorized program by the end of 1935, or three years earlier than was contemplated by the present legislation. It estimated that $75,000,000 would be spent during the present fiscal year.

RIGHTS FOR WOMEN IN INDIA DEMANDED

Leaders Present Claims of Depressed Classes for Equal Suffrage.

WESTERN PLAN FOUGHT

London, Dec. 22 (A.P.).—India's suffrage claims were laid before the round table conference today from two sources—by a spokesman demanding representation for the depressed classes, and by women who asked "reserved seats" for their sex in the legislature.

Dr. Bhim Ambedkar, a leader in unlift for India's millions of "untouchables," told the franchise subcommittee of the conference that equal adult suffrage must be given India.

"We can not consent to either dominion status or responsible government unless we are sure the depressed classes are going to be represented," he said.

Objection to the western system of elections whereby women run for office and are beaten by men was raised in a memorandum presented by the Begum Shah Nawaz and Mrs. Subbarayan, the two women delegates to the conference. Great western countries like Great Britain, the United States, Canada and Australia, offer poor examples to Indian women, they said.

Their memorandum pointed out that in England only fifteen women have been elected to Parliament in the last twelve years, and suggested a temporary measure allotting special seats in India's future law-making body to women.

Mrs. Subbarayan, wearing a flowing Eastern gown with a silken sari wound round her body and a single diamond on the side of her nose in the Eastern manner, told the conference that, although women are supposed to have franchise equally with men, there is not realy equality because few Indian women possess property.

The Begum Shah Nawaz suggested the extension of suffrage to 25 per cent of the adult population instead of 10 per cent as was suggested in the report of the Simon commission.

Sidney Franklin to Be Graduated in Bullring Where He Began.

Mexico City, Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Back in the land where he became a Torero, Sidney Franklin, of Brooklyn, N. Y., is billed to fight a bull in the Mexico City ring Sunday. He arrived today and indicated he preferred to be addressed in Spanish.

"Hello, Mr. Franklin," said a reporter, who greeted him.

"I am an American, my friend," replied Franklin, "but I am also a torero and speak Spanish."

The Brooklyn youth will step out of the Novillero class (novice), to receive his doctorado, or title of ace, in performances here. He declined the honor in his Spanish career in order to achieve it in Mexico, where he entered the bull ring several years ago.

—By CARLISLE BARGERON—

We may as well have an understanding of the rules which are to govern this Republican battle royal that is to be given to the country as the Washington's yuletide presentation. Just why the managers selected this season of the year for the thing is beyond our comprehension; their action shows an utter lack of feeling for their fellowmen, and a crust that even the season's felicities can not penetrate.

But they have made their selection and the show is on. We may as well make the best of it.

• • • •

HOWEVER, we want no such chaos, disorderly procedure or confusion such as attended last year's yuletide show. It was prohibition then, a battle of statements that made the Nation's Capitol look like the snow scene in East Lynn.

There were no rules prescribing the procedure at all. It must not be that way again.

Statements at all times of the day and night will not be tolerated. They must be issued early and only one statement a day will be permitted each side.

• • • •

IT would be much better and a more orderly presentation if each side should hold a meeting early every day and select one of its men to make the day's statement.

The two sides may take turns at being the first out of the gun. For example, today Mr. Lucas should have the first say because he had the last yesterday. Then tomorrow vice versa, as they say.

The rule will have to be rigidly enforced against rebuttals. That is to say, we'll be—well, we will not stand for getting statements from Mr. Lucas and Mr. Cutting in hand and then being informed that Mr. Lucas has another one, answering Mr. Cutting. That is simply not to be tolerated at all.

• • • •

PERHAPS Mr. Lucas gets the better of this arrangement because he has to issue all the statements on his side, not that he is alone, but then we have read the manuscript of this play, and it calls for Mr. Lucas appearing bravely alone at first, and gradually others appear or are drawn in.

But for the present the one statement a day rule helps Mr. Lucas. Because, don't think those Progressives have gone home and just left one of their number on the job. Nearly all of them are remaining in the trenches and armed with statements galore.

And another thing—there must be no statements at all on Christmas Day. There is no reason why the Republicans can't at least be as decent as the maid.

JURY FINDS SHEPARD GUILTY OF SLAYING WIFE BY POISON

brought forth others to reveal that the major had withdrawn from the dispensary large quantities of the drug.

It produced Grace Brandon herself to show that the attachment for her had flowered before the illness of Mrs. Shepard.

In opposition to this the defense painted a picture of Maj. Shepard as a long-suffering husband with a wife who was both alcoholic and a drug addict.

With these conflicting pictures in its mind, a jury of Kansas citizens, each a family man, took the case at 2:58 p. m. Saturday and argued it Saturday night, Sunday and today. At 1:57 W. A. Payne, the jury foreman, announced that Maj. Shepard had been found guilty as charged.

Offers of Aid.

Stunned by the verdict, Maj. Shepard tonight was showered with offers of sympathy and monetary aid.

An hour after the verdict was read Harry S. Glass, Denver defense attorney, reported a dozen offers of financial assistance to carry on a new trial, if granted, or to further an appeal.

A man who said he knew personally neither the officer or any of his counsel came to the hotel and offered $500 to carry on efforts for vindication. A $6 check was received yesterday from a friend in the Philippine Islands.

Men and women whose only view of Shepard has been in the courtroom during the three weeks' trial grasped his hand as he left the Federal building and expressed condolence.

Patients Express Sympathy.

But perhaps the most prized messages of sympathy were those from the 55 officers at Fitzsimmons Hospital, where the major is stationed, and one signed "the 1,100 patients in Fitzsimmons General Hospital at Denver."

C. L. Kagey, of Beloit, Kans., another Shepard attorney, said, "We convinced every one in Kansas City that Maj. Shepard was innocent except those twelve men of the jury." Attorney Glass called the verdict a "gross miscarriage of justice."

San Antonio, Tex., Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Grace Brandon declined to discuss the conviction of her former fiance this afternoon upon her late arrival at the field.

LOWERED SALES RESISTANCE MAKES JOBLESS EASY PREY

4 cents, including postage. The rest is profit. When firms, usually hundreds of miles away, receive the letters they are consigned to the waste paper basket.

Another prolific source of profit is the salesman racket, which is worked upon men as well as women. This scheme has gained a foothadd here and many ply it without fear of the law.

This racket has its genesis in a want ad column in which a man or woman is wanted "ready to accept a position at $5,000 a year, must be able to handle men." The person sought is advised to write to the advertiser.

Of course, the applicant gets an appointment with an executive in the concern. Also, he gets the job.

The usual gag is to give the applicant state or territorial rights on some fandangle of which he has never before heard.

The job is to peddle the device from door to door, the employe paying his own expenses, and receiving a commission in return. The evil element in this scheme is that the employer usually offers the article to the employe at a "greatly reduced" price.

Where he might only receive 25 cents commission on a single sale, he is offered the article at a price which would enable him to make a 50 cent profit on a unit sale—if he sells them.

Jobless Man Duped.

Usually the jobless man is taken in by this magnanimous offer and at the end of the week finds himself out of cash and with a lot of nonsalable doodads on his hands. If the employe quits, his resignation only makes room for another sucker.

Women and girls have been made victims of another variation of this racket. The swindle requires the girl to purchase the article "in order to make herself familiar with it."

She then signs a contract, which on the surface appears to be very generous. It guarantees her not only a commission, but an excellent monthly safary if certain conditions are fulfilled.

Among the conditions are that she must pursue a course of study given by the employer in order to familiarize herself with the article. Then, as qualifying phrase in the salary stipulation, she must make a definite number of calls and sales within the month.

Joker In Deal.

The joker in the deal is that it would be physically impossible to make all the sales required. Hence no salary is paid and the girl is swindled. If she raises a fuss, she is shown a clause in the contract that she owes the company for the instruction course.

Many girls, after a month of hard work, have left their positions still owing the swindlers money.

Agencies that specialize in domestic help have a few sharp practices that are distinctly their own. For instance, a local domestic employment agency with a number of inferior domestics on its roll has one excellent maid on duty at the office at all times.

Finds Excuse to Leave.

If a housekeeper sends for a maid or calls at the agency this maid of outstanding ability will be the one interviewed. Always she is hired, but within a day or two she finds some excuse for leaving, but offers to send a sister or relative in her place.

The "sister or relative" is always one of the less efficient maids at the agency. Thus the agent is able to rid himself of the dregs of his stock and at the same time collect his usual fee.

Miami Police Hold Two as Gangsters

One Who Escaped Believed Jack McGurn, Reputed Aid of Capone.

Miami, Fla., Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Two men who told police their names are Charles De Mato and Frank Marullo and who described themselves as gamblers, of Cleveland, Ohio, were in jail here today on charges of carrying concealed weapons and attempting to bribe officers.

Meanwhile, police are investigating a report that another man escaped arrest at the time the others were seized at a house in which was found a large photograph described by Chief of Detectives L. O. Scarboro as that of Louise Rolfe, known as "the blonde alibi" of Jack McGurn, reputed aid of "Scarface" Al Capone. Except for the girl's picture, Scarboro said he could find nothing to substantiate a report that the man who escaped was McGurn.

De Mato and Marullo were first arrested early Sunday morning after raiding officers. They were released soon afterward on a writ of habeas corpus, but were arrested again later.

Employed Are Urged To Give Part of Wages

Charleston, W. Va., Dec. 22 (A.P.).—A suggestion that persons regularly employed agree to give a certain amount of their wages for the next three months to relieve unemployment within their respective communities was made today by Howard S. Jarrett, State labor commissioner.

He estimated that 45,000 persons are jobless in West Virginia.

ASSISTANTS OF POST BEGIN DISTRIBUTION

the children in these families receive toys, candy and other children's delights.

Tomorrow The Post will publish the exact distribution of the entire amount raised so that the donors may know just where their money went and how many children were cared for by the various agencies who shared in the fund.

Part of the money was allotted to the agencies more than a week ago, that they might begin to line up the children and learn what they wanted and how much would be necessary to care for the youngsters in their particular territory.

The response to The Post fund has been marvelous, and the Toy Fund Editor has received many splendid letters praising the idea of furnishing Christmas for the children through their parents. The idea, however, would have been useless without the co-operation and help of the contributors. They put it across in a big way and The Post is grateful for the fine spirit shown by Washington residents in rallying to the cause.

Further details of the distribution and of the real cheer spread by the fund will be contained from time to time in The Post during the holiday season.

After the aerial coup d'etat had been achieved he created another stir by refusing a summons to the royal palace for an audience on the grounds that the king had kept him waiting two weeks before granting the appointment. Later, however, he called upon the king and the interview was interpreted as meaning that the liberals had swung to the side of the once exiled monarch.

Mme. Alexandia Kollantay Intimated to Have Lived "Too Bourgeois" Life.

NEW PEASANTS' OFFICIAL

Stockholm, Sweden, Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Departure for Moscow of Mme. Alexandra Kollantay, the Soviet Ambassador to Sweden, was interpreted today by the newspaper Nya Dagligt as really a recall by Soviet officials, who are said to consider the woman's work at Oslo as unproductive of satisfactory results.

The newspaper also says the woman ambassador is charged with having lived "to bourgeois" a life at Oslo and Stockholm, although until now Stalin's support has protected her from criticism.

Moscow, Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Andrei Andreev, recently elected chairman of the central control commission of the Communist party, was appointed commissar of workers and peasants' inspection by the central executive committee today.

JAILED SMITH TRIO ASK FOR NEW TRIAL

passed on the defendants, despite the verdict of the jury.

Defense attorneys sought to file the motions Saturday, but were frustrated when Mr. Dodds refused to accept service, stating that as an officer of the court he was forced to adhere to court rules which prohibit transaction of business after noon.

Failing to have their motions sustained by Justice Hitz, defense counsel still may seek the release of their clients by applying to any of the three justices of the Court of Appeals for an appeal bond. This would permit the three men their liberty pending the outcome of the appeal, which was noted by their counsel following the jury's verdict.

16 Grounds Are Cited.

In their plea for a new trial, defense counsel set out sixteen grounds why their prayer should be granted.

Defense counsel take particular exception to the fact that a juror while being qualified declared he believed the defendants guilty, and cite the fact that the court refused to declare a mistrial.

The lawyers of the former Smith company officials charge that the verdict was contrary to the evidence and the law. They also allege that Justice Hitz erred in not directing a verdict of acquital at the conclusion of the Government's evidence.

Alleged misconduct of Government counsel in the trial and refusal of the court to include sixteen defense prayers in the charge to the jury are among other grounds.

He complimented Gloth upon his efforts to collect this money, stating that testimony to the effect that Gloth had purposely delayed the settlement in order to further ends of his own did not make any impression upon the court.

In conclusion Judge Browning said, "I do not think the prosecution has made out a case of malfeasance, misfeasance, or gross neglect, despite the apparent irregularities."

TOILERS CONFRONT ENFORCED HOLIDAY

3,000 Per Diem District Employes May Lose Pay for Tomorrow.

ALTERNATIVE IS SOUGHT

Unless a loophole can be found by District authorities today, 3,000 per diem employes of the municipal government will be forced to take a holiday tomorrow, as ordered by President Hoover, without being compensated for it.

Following the receipt of information that navy yard day workers would be paid for the Christmas Eve holiday an investigation was started in the District Building to determine whether District laborers could not be treated similarly. The matter may be before the District Commissioners this afternoon.

Per diem employes will be paid for Christmas Day, although they do not work, as the law provides for compensation on legal holidays. All salary employes, about 8,500, will be paid for both days, although a large proportion of them will have two days' vacation.

The holidays will make no difference to the 5,000 policemen, firemen and school teachers. The latter are on vacation anyway, and the two former groups will have to work as usual. Approximately 3,500 employes will thus be paid for the two days without having to work.

Both Dr. Luther H. Reichelderfer, president of the Board of Commissioners, and William W. Bride, corporation counsel, said yesterday that while they regretted the situation, they knew of no authority permitting the payment of the per diem employes for the special holiday.

Land for extending the street has been condemned, but the work has not been included in this year's estimates. Maj. Gotwals took the request under advisement.

Arguments Concluded In Disbarment Case

Five justices of the District Supreme Court took under advisement yesterday the question of the disbarment of R. Golden Donaldson, a member of the District bar.

The justices heard evidence in the case last June, but were unable to agree. They have heard arguments on behalf of Mr. Donaldson and the grievance committee of the District Bar Association, which preferred the charges. Arguments were begun Saturday and concluded yesterday.

Five Oyster Dealers Forfeit Total of $50

Five oyster dealers yesterday forfeited $10 collateral each in Police Court on charges of selling shucked oysters containing more than 10 per cent liquid, which is the maximum allowed by the District weights and meaures law.

The law is applicable to any liquid, according to George M. Roberts, superintendent of weights and measures, whether it is water or oyster liquor, the purpose being to see to it that consumers pay for the oysters alone.

Emma Thomfordt, of 5410 Thirteenth street northwest, yesterday filed a petition in voluntary bankruptcy in District Supreme Court. She lists liabilities of $55,744.28 and unknown assets. Attorneys Tobriner and Graham appear for the petitioner.

Griffin, Heir to Great Estate, Once Engaged Here, Elopes

Son of Late Millionaire Wheel Manufacturer Weds Arizona Girl; Betrothal of Miss Thompson to Him Was Broken Last Year.

Word of the elopement of Tom Griffin, son of Mrs. Paul Bastedo, of this city, and heir to the late George Francis Griffin's millions, with Tucson, Ariz., girl, reached Washington yesterday.

Young Griffin left his Yerba Buena Ranch, located near Nogales, to elope with Miss Beatrice Sandoval, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Sandoval, of Tucson, according to a wire received by Mrs. Bastedo after the ceremony.

The couple afterward returned to the ranch for a brief stay, and later visited the bridegroom's sister, Mrs. John Greenslade, at Coronado, Calif. They are now en route to Honolulu on their honeymoon.

A year ago Tom Griffin was engaged to marry Miss Elizabeth Ridgely Thompson, daughter of Mrs. Edward Dickinson Taylor, of Edgehill, Shadwell, Va. Two days before the wedding, which was to have taken place at Edgehill, plans for the marriage were canceled. Mrs. Bastedo sent her son to Europe.

He had been staying at Yerba Buena since he returned from his European trip last June, and is understood to have met his bride on one of his visits to Tucson. Griffin's father, from whom he inherited his fortune, was president of the Griffin Wheel Co. Formerly a student at St. Alban's, and the University of Virginia, the bridegroom was popular in Washington's younger set.

41 Couples Seek Marriage Licenses as Holidays Near

The pre-Christmas rush for marriage licenses opened with a bang yesterday. Mrs. Maude Rogers Rynex and Capt. Harvey Given, marriage license clerk and assistant, respectively, being on the "go" all day.

When the License Bureau in District Supreme Court closed for the day a total of 41 couples had applied. Most of them registered from out of town, although quite a number were local.

One of the features of the day's grist was the application of Representative Charles Bateman Timberlake, of Sterling, Colo. The bridegroom specified that he is 75 and that he is now stopping at the Carlton Hotel. His intended bride is Mrs. Roberta Wood Elliott, 32 years old, of 642 Eighth street northeast. Mr. Timberlake is entering on his third adventure in matrimony, while the bride is hazarding her second. The Rev. James Shera Montgomery was named as officiating minister.

Another feature of the day was the application of William Berry Brooks and Sylvia Brooks, both of Atlantic City, N. J. Brooks, in making his application, specified that it was to be a remarriage and designated the Rev. J. T. Loeb as officiating minister.

Will of St. Elizabeths Patient Upheld by Court

A District Supreme Court jury before Justice Frederick L. Siddons yesterday upheld the will of Mrs. Hannah S. J. Flaherty, who died several months ago at St. Elizabeths Hospital at the age of 86. The woman was committed as a patient October 12, 1928, and her will was attacked on the grounds of undue influence and incapacity.

The will specified that the estate, except for a few bequents, was to go to Mrs. Mary R. McKeever, a daughter, of 25 U street northwest. Mrs. McKeever, through Attorney Godfrey L. Munter, defended her mother's will, and the verdict was returned after Mr. Munter had announced that a settlement with the contestants had been reached. The extent of the estate was not disclosed.

$10,000 Damage Suit Filed in Boy's Death

An accident in which a boy riding a bicycle was fatally injured was echoed yesterday in District Supreme Court when Rose Forde Kilcourse, as administratrix of the estate of Thomas James Kilcourse, jr., of London Hall Apartments, filed suit against Herbert L. Adams, of 3616 Connecticut avenue northwest, seeking to recover $10,000 damages, the maximum for death in the District.

The plaintiff, through Attorney Hyman M. Goldstein, alleges that on January 3 last the youth was riding a bicycle at Kalorama road and Connecticut avenue northwest, when he was struck by an automobile operated by the defendant. Negligence on the part of the defendant in going through an amber light is charged.

Other officers elected were Richard E. Ashby, vice president; John E. Birdsell, secretary; Harry C. Manvell, treasurer; Raymond Peters, sergeant-at-arms, and Ray Delphy, Ralph Fox, Robert B. Gott, W. L. Marsden, E. S. McGrath and J. L. Vanpouke, directors. W. W. Greenwell, H. T. Meiners and C. J. Benner were elected trustees and Mrs. Birdsell, Mr. Peters and Mr. Manvell, delegates to the annual convention.

Restraining Order Dismissal Sought

Trustee Wants Removal of Ban on Property Sale at 221 R Street.

Jesse H. Mitchell, of 1111 U street northwest, filed a motion yesterday, asking the District Supreme Court to dismiss a temporary restraining order which prevents him and others from selling property at 221 R street northwest, under a deed of trust.

The injunction was signed last week by Justice Jesse C. Adkins on request of Lillie V. Hutton, owner in fee simple of the property. In his motion Mr. Mitchell says the injunction does not state why it was granted without notice, does not fix the time when it is to expire, and does not specifically set forth the reasons for its issuance.

Mr. Mitchell, as trustee, the Columbia Realty & Investment Co., and three other defendants were named in the injunction, which was predicated on contentions of the plaintiff that she did not owe any payments after being credited "with the usurious charge of commission of money retained by the defendants."

Attorney W. L. Houston, who filed the motion, gave Attorney Philip Wagshal, plaintiff's counsel, notice that arguments would be presented January 5.

Change of Depot Site Asked by Bus Company

The Washington-Luray Bus Lines, Inc., through E. B. Neifort, its president, applied yesterday to the Public Utilities Commission for permission to remove the company's Capital terminal from Ninth and C streets to Twelfth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, where a bus depot is maintained.

Mr. Neifort explained that the present terminal, the old Bijou Theater, is to be razed soon after the first of the year to make way for the Federal building program. The site now desired eventually will be torn down for the same purpose.

Toy Locomotives Stolen.

Two toy locomotives and a toy railway car were stolen yesterday from the store of William H. Diemer, 3124 Fourteenth street, according to a report made to police. The miniature "rolling stock" was valued at $30.

Plans for Independence Square Here Considered

Plans submitted by 30 students in ten universities for the transforming of Lincoln Park into Independence Square as a part of the proposal to build up East Capitol street, are being considered by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and other interested groups, it was learned yesterday.

The designs were submitted in a contest sponsored by the Beaux Arts Institute of Design of New York City. They contemplate the erection of thirteen buildings, one for each of the original States, around Independence Square.

Father in Hospital, Son to Be Buried

Burned in Effort to Save Boy, Man's Christmas to Be Cheerless.

There will be little Christmas joy this year in the home of John D. De Spears, 1334 Four-and-a-Half street southwest.

Naval Hospital physicians yesterday told him he may not attend the funeral of his son this afternoon because of burns he suffered in trying to rescue the child from a blaze Sunday morning. Nor will he be able to spend Christmas with his wife and two remaining children.

Funeral services for 2-year-old William H. DeSpears, burned to death as he set fire to the Christmas tree he had been forbidden to see, will be held at 2 o'clock at the funeral rooms of Thomas Sergeon, 1011 Seventh street northwest. Burial will be at Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Dr. A. H. Dearing said the father's candition was improved.

Shoplifting Laid to Woman.

Five charges of petty larceny are lodged against Isabel Reddick, 20-year-old colored woman living on T street near Eleventh, who was arrested yesterday by Policeman C. K. Culver, assigned to guard against shoplifting in department stores. The woman is said to have taken articles from five downtown stores.

New Traffic Bill Gets Indorsement

Commerce Chamber Unit Backs Proposed Plan at Luncheon Session.

The proposed District traffic bill, in which all responsibility for traffic control will be placed on the District Commissioners, received the indorsement yesterday of the transportation committee of the Washington Chamber of Commerce, at a luncheon meeting in the Carlton Hotel.

The bill, which has been introduced in the House, was evolved by the Commissioners after a survey of traffic conditions here by Miller McClintock, traffic expert of Harvard University, and an advisory committee of District citizens. The bill provides for establishment of financial responsibility in case of accident, registration of titles and of all automobiles.

The history of the bill was outlined to the committee by Capt. Herbert C. Whitehurst, District coordinator; Inspector E. W. Brown and Capt. B. A. Lamb, of the Traffic Bureau, also spoke. The committee went on record as recommending substitution of lights for buttons on one side of the safety zones on Connecticut avenue. George E. Keneipp, chairman of the committee, and E. D. Merrill, vice chairman, were in charge of the meeting.

BEHIND THE SCREENS

With NELSON B. BELL

AGAIN comes along a week during which the motion picture fan will have a tough time keeping his theater dates on straight. Everything will run along in orthodox shipshape fashion until Christmas Day, but from then until after New Year's it will be every man for himself.

Three of the downtown first-run picture houses will break out new programs on Christmas Day—the Rialto, RKO-Keiths and Metropolitan.

The Rialto will present Charlie Murray and George Sidney in "The Cohens and Kellys in Africa" as its yuletide special, beginning Thursday morning.

RKO-Keith's moves its celebration of the holiday up even a notch farther than that, inaugurating the run of Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey in "Hook, Line and Sinker" with the 9 o'clock performance tomorrow night. This comedy is considered such a sure-fire smash that it will be permitted to usurp the time that ordinarily would be devoted to the final presentation of "Madonna of the Streets."

The Metropolitan on Christmas Day will unfurl still another new policy by putting split-weeks definitely on the calendar of movie events. Eddie Cantor in "Whoopee" will be the first attraction to play the abbreviated booking, this engagement lasting only two days, when the house will get on its regular schedule of Saturday and Wednesday changes.

Watch your newspaper ads every day; see your dentist at least twice a year—pardon me, that's a couple of others fellows!

Ann Suter's homecoming after an absence of four years was not, after all, so auspicious as was called for by the blueprints.

Some of the clownish antics and a few of the lilting lyrics, so I am advised by my ear-to-the-ground department, failed to meet with that immediate acclaim deemed a prime requisite of any well ordered homcoming. After what are reported to have been a few reasonably sharp colloquys back stage, Washington's own singing comedienne became ill. It didn't Suter, as you might say, and her name accordingly was deleted from the billing, the lights and the ads Sabbath evening.

So now Ann has the laryngitis, or croup, or fallen archness, or something. Anyhow, a fever!

Another casualty of the holiday week is Ace Berry, territorial manager for Radio-Keith-Orpheum, with headquarters in Washington.

Sunday night while accompanying Mrs. Berry to Union Station for a yuletide visit to her home in Pittsburgh, the taxicab was in a collision from which Mr. Berry suffered serious injuries and Mrs. Berry bruises and shock. Mr. Berry was able to return to his home, but has been confined to bed ever since with the ligaments in his back so badly torn and his back so severely sprained that movement is impossible and a long period of painful and tedious convalescence is in prospect.

Tough luck, old friend, coming right at Christmas like this, but now I know what they mean by an Ace in the hole!

Tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock the Fox Theater will be given over to the kindly uses of the Central Union Mission and its Christmas party for the orphans of the District. Mr. and Mrs. Bennett, of the mission, will gather together at the Fox the entire enrollment of all of Washington's elemosynary institutions for one grand Christmas celebration. It is estimated that fully 1,600 orphans will be assembled for this occasion.

A special program has been arranged for the entertainment of the little guests and Mrs. Hoover, First Lady of the Land, will personally assist in the distribution of candy, toys and fruit to those of the city's youngsters whose yuletide otherwise might be more dreary than joyous.

Another notable celebration at the Fox will be that arranged for the boys and girls of The Junior Post department of The Post next Monday. Through the courtesy and cooperation of Hardie Meakin and the Fox staff, a special program will be presented. Many unique features are being planned for this gala event.

It just goes to show what kind of hours these theater fellows keep.

On Christmas morning between the hours of 3 and 4 a. m., Ron and Don, organists at the Fox, and Tom Olsen, stentor of the same establishment, will undertake a special broadcast through station WOL in an effort to reach the home folks out in Seattle, Wash.

Ron and Don and Tom all hail from Seattle and are assured that their air channel will be fairly clear at three in the morning and that they have a grand chance to get their greetings through. Ron and Don will do the playing, Tom the saying.

The next stage comedian of note to be placed under a long term motion picture contract will be Jimmie Durante (Schnozzle to you, you fresh thing), of the justly celebrated team of Clayton, Jackson and Durante.

Jimmie has done bits in pictures before, but it was the smash hit he has scored in "The New Yorkers," in which Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians are also a wow, that tipped the beam in his favor for the exclusive services contract. From the present outlook this seems to mean that the team is broken up once the contract takes effect. Clayton and Jackson are not included.

And by the way, keep your eye open for "Those Three French Girls," coming to the Rialto. They are Yola D'Avril, Fifi Dorsay and Sandra Ravel.

Oo-la-la, pom de terre, eau de cologne, Chevrolet coupe, sacre bleu scarcely expresses it! I mean it scarcely does.

Oh, goody, goody, I can hardly wait for tomorrow evening to come so I can do my Christmas shopping early!

School Boy Patrol Going to Theater

1,500 Who Boast Splendid Record Will See Movie Saturday.

The school boy patrol of the District, composed of 1,500 members in the white schools, will be guests at a special showing of "Tom Sawyer" at the Fox Theater, Saturday morning. They will meet in front of the theater at 8:45 o'clock to be photographed.

The patrol holds the distinction attaching to the fact that only one child has been injured in the precincts it controls since the patrol was organized three years ago. There have been no accidental deaths in territory guarded by the boys, says Selden M. Ely, supervising principal of the fifth division, in charge of the boy safety work.

Mexican Bard Drinks Poison, Toasting Hosts

Mexico City, Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Manuel Lopez, a wandering minstrel, strummed a sad tune on his guitar as he strolled into a cabaret today.

"Why so sad?" asked a bubbling drinker as the minstrel halted at a table occupied by merrymakers.

"My spirit droops tonight," replied Manuel.

When offered a drink the minstrel dropped a small tablet into it.

"What's that for?" inquired the festive spirits.

"To clear my voice forever—to your health, senors!" returned the wandering bard as he collapsed, a suicide.

Deaths in Javanese Volcano Now 700

Rescuers Are Unable to Approach Fields Sizzling With Lava.

Amsterdam, Holland, Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Seven hundred natives were killed and 15,000 cattle perished in the recent eruption of Merapi, the volcano in Java. Reports from Java today said red hot lava still covered the fertile grazing lands, accounting for the heavy loss of stock.

Eight native villages were wiped out, several others suffered heavy casualties and thousands of refugees are pouring into the larger towns in central Java.

It has been impossible to move rescue parties into the affected area because of the showers of ashes which continue to fall.

PROSPECTS IN CONGRESS.

Congress made a good showing during its brief preholiday session, in spite of the acrimonious attacks upon the President and the disruption of the interparty harmony program. Emergency measures dealing with the depression are now law. The way has been cleared for enactment of the appropriation bills as soon as Congress reassembles after the first of the year. Unless legislation is deliberately obstructed there will be ample time to enact these bills and pass on other urgent matters before March 4.

In eighteen days Congress enacted the drought relief bill, the emergency public work bill to relieve unemployment, and a measure granting $150,000,000 to the Federal Farm Board. The Postoffice-Treasury bill can be sent to the President as soon as the House agrees to allow funds for salary increases as provided by the classifications act. Supply bills for the Interior and Agriculture Departments have been acted on by the House and sent to the Senate. In addition, the Senate has confirmed nominees for the Federal Power Commission.

If Congress is willing to move at a similar pace for the remainder of this session there will be no occasion for an extra session. The world court issue has been wisely sidetracked, and President Hoover has given assurance that he will not call a special session of the Senate to consider it. Congress ought to enact the Vestal bill, so that the United States may become a member of the international copyright union before the time limit expires. But this measure is not controversial and should take but little time. A handful of Democratic senators are planning to waste some time in opposing confirmation of the new Tariff Commission, but this controversy has already been thrashed out before the Senate finance committee and ought not to delay the legislative program to any serious extent. The Muscle Shoals controversy, which is now in deadlock before a conference committee, looms up as a stumbling block, but it is not sufficiently important to justify a session of the new Congress before next December.

Enactment of the relief measures was expedited by the attitude of President Hoover. Had not the President taken leadership in this matter the Senate and House might still be in disagreement over the amounts to be appropriated and the manner of spending them. Fortunately the President made his influence felt, and the Senate was forced to yield. A little back-firing from the Senate was inevitable, but on the whole the effect of the President's leadership was stimulating. If Mr. Hoover continues to take an active part in pressing necessary legislation before Congress the work of the short session will be facilitated.

Attempts will doubtless be made to enact additional relief measures when Congress reassembles. Many schemes to cure the depression have been proposed in Congress, but chances for their approval are very slight. The Government has already strained its financial resources to provide relief. No time should be wasted on consideration of other relief bills. After the supply bills and other pressing matters are out of the way the greatest contribution Congress can make to economic recovery is adjournment.

COMMERCIALIZED COLLEGE GAMES.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler's suggestion that gate receipts and all other elements of commercialism in football be abolished is not new. Virtually the same idea was presented to the National Collegiate Athletic Association last year by Dr. Frank Barber Day, president of Union College. It is one of those dreams in which educators indulge, and which promoters of sports eschew.

It is a well-known fact that football is no longer an extra-curricular activity for college men. It is big business. Instead of being conducted in a fine atmosphere of amateur sportsmanship, as is rowing, it takes on the aspects of a prize fight. High-salaried professionals direct well-disciplined human machines against each other for the amusement of huge crowds. In order to build up a winning team scholastic standards of the participants are forgotten; financial inducements are held out to promising athletes. The practice is not radically different from the sale of professional baseball players.

No university can play the game on an honest amateur basis without suffering repeated defeat and consequent unpopularity. Football, therefore, exerts an influence over higher institutions of learning that is far out of proportion to its importance.

Dr. Butler makes the sound suggestion that an athletic league take jurisdiction over college sports with a view to enforcing scholastic qualifications for all players and abolishing financial assistance. But what would result from his scheme to have the alumni of each school endow athletics? It is the alumni that have brought college athletics to their present status. Former students are so anxious to have their alma maters win that they wink at any unethical practice that is calculated to bring victory. It doesn't seem probable that a mere abolition of gate receipts could stop the subsidizing of players or the application of machine methods to the sport. The tendency would be to enhance the influence of the alumni, and give universities with the most wealthy patrons an additional advantage.

Commercialism in football can not be uprooted by merely changing its source of revenue. It is improbable that its abuses can be remedied until the game is restored to its proper function as an adjunct to university education. And there seems to be no hope of such a return to common sense in the near future.

URBAN AMERICA.

It has long been known that the 1930 census would show a considerable increase in urban population. That fact was suggested in the increase of cities having more than 100,000 inhabitants. The indications were strengthened when the Census Bureau revealed that a considerable number of villages in agricultural regions had been deserted. The exact figures are now available, however, and they reveal that 56.2 per cent of the people are urban, as compared with 51.4 per cent in 1920.

At this rate of increase the United States will be entirely urbanized within a few decades. The South is still largely rural, but manufacturing industries are taking root there and cities are growing rapidly. In the manufacturing States of the East as well as in the Far West cities have experienced unusual development in the last ten years. Even in States where the total population has not been increased cities have grown.

It would be a mistake, however, to suppose that this higher urban percentage represents only growth of big cities. In farming districts people are congregating in larger communities for the sake of convenience. Sociologists say that a town of less than 5,000 inhabitants must make unusual sacrifices to provide education, amusement, facilities for worship, libraries and adequate marketing facilities for its people. The automobile has made it possible for farmers to live "in town" and drive to their work each day. Growing communities of this kind also figure in the higher urban percentage.

Division of the population into urban and rural categories is, of course, wholly arbitrary. This year the Census Bureau included in the urban column townships with a population of 10,000 or more, provided they have a density of 1,000 persons per square mile. But the principal dividing line between urban and rural incorporated places is a population of 2,500. It requires a stretch of the imagination to think of towns with 2,500 to 3,000 people as being urban. From the standpoint of the city dweller any community with less than 10,000 people is rural, unless it is adjacent to a large city.

The line must be drawn somewhere, however, and since it has been established at 2,500 it would be confusing to change it. But it is well to remember that, although the country is more than half urban under this classification, only a small percentage of its people live in large cities.

PRICES COME DOWN.

The bright lining to the cloud of depression is the reduced level of commodity prices that has been brought about in the last year or so. The man whose salary has not been reduced is able to live better, to clothe himself and his family cheaper, to furnish his house more elaborately, or to save a greater proportion of his income than he could have done at this time a year ago. Evidence to this effect is contained in the new catalogue of a Chicago mail order house. Reductions in prices ranging from 6 per cent upward as compared with the prices of a year ago are announced by this company.

Among items selling at reductions over last year's price, and the percentage of decline are: Automobile tires, 14.5 per cent; flat silk crepe, 40.8; all silks, 27.5 average; all-wool blankets, 16.4; harness, 17.6; barbed wire, 6.1; colored pongee, 35.4; wool flannel, 12.6; frock prints, 28; cretonne, 19.3; inner spring mattresses, 17; sinks, 10.1; flashlights, 13.3; felt base rugs, 16; underwear, 17.7. Sheets, which this company sold for 84 cents in 1917 and which sold for $1.98 in 1920, are again offered at 84 cents. Sheeting that was offered for 32 cents a yard in 1917 and 79 cents in 1920, is now selling at 32 cents. In addition, the company prepays postage on these items, which it did not do in either 1917 or 1920.

Mail order catalogues, in which a large number of items are arrayed side by side, are fairly reliable indexes of price levels. The fact that this Chicago house has reduced prices so considerably constitutes irrefutable evidence of a general decline in commodity prices.

BIG BILL OF WINDY CITY.

Big Bill Thompson, mayor of Chicago, tosses his hat into the ring again, and, Chicago being what it is, the chances are that he will be reelected for his fourth term. Thirty years ago, Big Bill won an aldermanic seat as a "reform" candidate, and in 1915 he first captured the city hall. Reelected in 1919, he was succeeded in 1923 by William E. Dever, candidate of the "better element," but in 1927 Big Bill again rode to victory on a platform notable chiefly for its advocacy of "America First." Now he seeks reelection apparently on the strength of "his record."

Chicago is practically broke. The concluding days of its last fiscal year were noteworthy for the struggle its treasurer had to raise enough money even to pay teachers' salaries. Chicago remains the haven of the lawless. Recently the Government stepped in with a campaign against Chicago's gangsters and racketeers based on their evasion of the income tax. Chicago is honeycombed with vice and corruption. But Big Bill Thompson seems to think everything is lovely. "Has anybody," he asks, in announcing his candidacy, "built more bridges, widened more miles of streets, or accomplished more to improve the water supply?" He claims credit for straightening the river and for driving King George out of the public schools. If he had been as active against gangsters as he was against King George, perhaps he could have driven them out, too.

There is opposition to the reelection of Big Bill this year and he may be defeated. But the rest of the country won't believe that another has become Mayor of Chicago until the final vote is tabulated.

SCHOOL CHILDREN'S CAR FARE.

The bill reported favorably by the Senate District committee to establish a reduced fare on street cars and buses for school children is probably the most satisfactory solution of the problem that can be made. This measure directs the Public Utilities Commission to determine what the fare should be, provided that it shall not exceed one-half of the adult fare. The commission will be able to give more attention to the subject than Congress could. It is more competent to determine what rate will be equitable to the public and to the carriers.

The House bill, which attempted to fix the school fare at 2 cents, was not satisfactory. Congress ought not to fix definite rates for any public carriers. Such an arbitrary method borders on confiscation of property. Rate-making for public utilities is the function of a quasi-judicial body, not of a legislature.

Whatever the rate is, the public will have to pay for transportation of school children. If the rate is so low that it does not cover the expense involved, the balance must come from the fares of adults. There is no advantage in cutting the school rate too low. Why should the cost of transporting children to school be passed on to other users of street cars and buses? If this charge is considered a part of the general expense of educating children, then it would be more equitable to pay it from the public treasury.

The commission will no doubt be able to determine upon a fare that will cost parents of school children as little as possible without imposing any greater burden upon other patrons of these conveyances and without impairing their service to the public.

Scientists have found evidence that a race of giants once lived in America. They must have lived during preprohibition days.

WASHINGTON ALLEYS

By JOHN IHLDER.

For nearly 70 years social and civic agencies in the District of Columbia have labored with problems presented by the inhabited alleys. We began, as we nearly always begin, by trying to mitigate. We noted that in the alleys there is excessive amount of disease, vice, crime. So we tried to improve the alleys.

As a result alleys have been paved. Sewers and water mains have been extended into them. In one case, that of the notorious Willow Tree alley, Congress actually caused the dwellings to be demolished and in place of them created a playground. Go and look at it. It is an illustration of the futility of a half-way measure—a good thing wrongly placed.

In 1929 the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, in accordance with the terms of the act creating it, took up the question of housing. Obviously alley dwellings constituted the most pressing part of the question. It made a thorough study of the inhabited alleys. It studied the history of alley legislation. It consulted those who had to deal with the alleys and their products.

The commission became convinced that the inhabited alleys are centers of disease, vice and crime and that the only remedy is to wipe them out. Paving them, extending sewers and water mains into them had proved to be mere palliatives. The root cause of their iniquity is that they constitute a series of little hidden communities in which antisocial activities flourish. It makes little difference whether they breed disease, vice and crime or whether the diseased, the vicious and the criminal find in them a congenial refuge. Whichever the process the result is the same.

So the commission drafted a bill designed to rid the Capital of its inhabited alleys. In this bill two points were kept in mind:

1. Future use of property now used for dwelling house purposes.

2. Rehousing alley dwellers.

The bill recognizes that if one abuse is not to be followed by another some socially desirable use must be found for the alleys. Simply to leave them vacant would invite new troubles. Moreover, the squares containing inhabited alleys are, as at present designed, only partially useful for present-day needs. By replatting them they can be converted from liabilities to assets of great value.

A few of the inhabited alleys may be converted into minor streets. Others, by adding to them adjacent property, may be converted into school playgrounds or public playgrounds or neighborhood parks. Others will be needed for extensions to public buildings and for other public uses. Still others lend themselves to socially and economically desirable private uses if the various small parcels now scattered among many owners can be assembled, replatted and sold. Among these uses are residential places, automobile parking spaces, garages and repair shops, or additions to street properties now too shallow for modern store, office and apartment buildings.

The period granted for the conversion of inhabited alleys is ten years.

The method proposed by the bill is to authorize the United States Housing Corporation to acquire the necessary property in squares containing inhabited alleys by purchase, condemnation or gift; replat it and sell, &c. Within ten years the work should be completed.

For this purpose the bill provides that the housing corporation shall utilize $500,000 of the amount now standing to its credit in the Federal Treasury and that after the first year Congress shall loan $500,000 annually, or so much thereof as may be needed, at 4 per cent per annum in the form of a revolving fund. This loan is to be repaid from the proceeds of sales, &c., after the property has been replatted.

QUESTIONS FOR THE BOY.

Boy, if a mountain you should see,
Crusted with jewels thick,
And you were told that you were free
Each day a gem to pick
And bear away the precious stone,
Henceforth to be your very own,
Would you return with spade and sack,
Or on such fortune turn your back?

Suppose by him who watched it there
'Twas very plainly told
That each could take what he could bear
Of silver and of gold,
But must himself alone obtain
And carry what his strength could gain,
Would you begrudge the labor which
Promised in time to make you rich?

Well, college is a mountain steep,
With jewels richly set,
And who shall venture there may keep
Whate'er he wills to get.
But he himself must dig it out,
Unaided carry it about,
And to that mountain come alone
To make the knowledge there his own.

Who toils for truth shall find it there,
'Tis ever on display,
And none who watches you shall care
How much you take away.
The gems are stored on ledge and shelf,
But you must earn them for yourself.
'Tis yours to choose and yours to say
What riches you will bear away.

When the Fish Aren't Running There Is Time to Mend Your Nets.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

BILL JONES was a fool. Some of his more cynical acquaintances remarked that he "came by it honest," meaning that his father showed symptoms of the same affliction, but the truth is that Bill had brains enough as original equipment and might have been a model young man had not his old dad's affection made fools of them both.

Bill was an only child. His old dad loved him unwisely, gave him too much liberty and too much spending money, and then scolded him for being ornery—as though a potter should shape a pot and then blame it for being crooked.

There were many scenes, all rather shameful, and at last the old man threatened to kick Bill out to fend for himself if he played the fool once more.

Of course, Bill's pride was hurt and he sought to regain it by getting drunk. It wasn't easy, for his system was so habituated to alcohol that additional doses had little effect, but at last he achieved a state of maudlin idiocy and in that condition signed his dad's name to a five-figure check to buy jewelry for a chorus girl.

The old man didn't keep his promise literally, but he did better. Bill went to bed in a dinner jacket and woke up on a codfish schooner miles at sea. He had been kidnaped.

Being a poor sailor, he had ample opportunity to rid himself of poisons. For a week his stomach rebelled when he was invited to share the homely rations of the sailors. But later, when he learned that he was doomed by his old dad's strategy to spend many weeks at sea and could choose between working or starving, he began to earn his salt pork and like it.

He fished all day from a dory. His hands blistered and cracked, and the sea rubbed salt in his wounds. But as the days passed, the bitterness in his heart gave place to a wholesome humility. He began to win the respect of his fellows. His eyes cleared; his skin lost its tinge of yellow; his muscles hardened; and, best of all, he began to realize that he had been a ghastly ass and never would be again.

The treatment was heroic, but it made him fit.

Now consider hard times. The stupid think they will last forever, as they thought soft times would last forever. The wise know that nothing endures forever except change and taxes.

Good times will return—the best times, according to some business leaders, the land has ever known.

Meanwhile present conditions afford an excellent opportunity to mend our ways—to get rid of lax and wasteful methods that developed in soft times—to stop leaks, modernize, tighten the loose belts—even to rebuild the health we didn't have time to care for last year.

Depression is a bitter dose, but it can be made a blessing.

Bill's experience would have been wasted if he had spent his time moaning instead of baiting hooks.

Democratic Program.
Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Everybody knew, of course, that the Democrats expected to organize the House in the next Congress, elect a Speaker and dominate the committees. But the threat to the Administration forces was brought home to them by Mr. Garner's announcement that he would shortly call a meeting of his fellow partisans who were elected to the Seventy-second Congress for the purpose of formulating their program.

It is figured that the 32 most important committee chairmanships would go to the South, leaving only fifteen for distribution among the representatives of other sections, notwithstanding Mr. Garner's assertion that the North will not be ignored. So it is not surprising that Southern Democratic members have been so active in trying to obstruct the Administration program at this short session, for the temptation to force an early extra session is especially strong.

As for legislation, should the Democrats gain control, they will try to enact some sweeping changes. The tariff may be the first point of attack. Railroad legislation, in any event, will be to the fore. But the Republicans are not ready to concede control to the Democrats. There is still that slight margin in favor of Republican rule. And if the Republicans can manage to hold the reins of power in the committees, they will be able to impose a needed check on the radical tendencies of their Democratic brethren.

Norris, Mutineer.
New York Times.

There was no reason why the Republican national committee should not openly oppose the reelection of Mr. Norris. In no sense, save in name, is he Republican. His heart was with the elder La Follette in 1924. He supported Gov. Smith in 1928. To attack the policies of this administration and its predecessor has been his meat and drink. He did not need the help nor did he fear the enmity of the regular Republican organization. In the first flush of his chairmanship Mr. Fess promised that the committee would "aid every nominee." He had been asked specifically about Nebraska. He replied that it was "no exception."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Southern Republican Calls Upon Regulars to Repudiate Senator Norris.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Should the Republican leaders in the Senate or the National Committee give any serious consideration to the complaints of Senator Norris, or fail in any respect in support of Mr. Lucas in the controversy growing out of the recent election in Nebraska, the party will at once be held as having surrendered to its bitterest foe, and will thus invite just condemnation at the bar of public opinion.

It is known from statements by party leaders that there was no sincere support given by either party to its nominee in that State in the recent senatorial election; that while there was a "proffer" of support to Mr. Hitchcock from the Democratic senatorial committee, it was known that such offer was not genuine and that the party leaders in the Senate preferred to have Norris, a nominal Republican, with his party perfidy and weasel political practice, trailing under the cloak of Republicanism, but in fact the most consistent and dependable ally of the Democratic Party in the Senate. On the other hand, to say that the Republican leaders had any sympathetic interest in Senator Norris, or desired that he succeed in that election, would be saying that the party leaders would seek to continue in power its most inveterate enemy and maligner.

As a Southern Republican, a believer in party regularity and party principles, with the fine traditions of the party in mind and with all the inspiring perspective of party leadership from Lincoln to Hoover, this is an appeal to those now charged with party leadership both in the National Committee and in the Senate, to recognize only the men who are now faithful to the trust; to stand by the President, who is calling for support in the fulfillment of party promises under which he was clothed with power; to stand by party leaders who are now attempting to drive from the ranks of the party its traitorous foes and to restore party leadership to those worthy to be followed. The call of Lucas is that of a militant, and courageous, and fearless party leader who deserves to be heard; and to fail him in this hour, in this crisis, in his onslaught against party renegades and rebels, is to fail a military leader in the hour of conflict. To your arms, O Republicans!

Federal Employe Suggests Retirement Plan, Which Would Help Unemployment Situation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As I understand the five-day week proposal for Government employes, it is a temporary measure. If the bill is enacted into law, one year later, or possibly two, the 50,000 or more extra employes taken on by the Government would have to be dropped, and the unemployment situation would not be improved at all. Therefore, I suggest a permanent fixture to the retirement law, as follows:

Make retirement compulsory when the employe has 25 years service to his credit; remove the age limit; revise the annuity table so as to make the annuities the same for 25 years service as they now are for 30 years service; eliminate extensions; increase, if necessary, the contributions of the employes from 3½ per cent to 5 per cent.

This plan would cost the Government very little and a better situation would be created, because the results would be permanent. If the above suggestions are enacted into law there would be at least one permanent fixture against unemployment placed on record.

No matter how important or unimportant the position is, there is always a man, or woman, ready to step forward and fill it. Give men and women their chance for advancement by allowing an employe to retire when he has 25 years to his credit. Give men and women on the Civil Service list a chance to work for Uncle Sam.

I have a long way to go before I can retire, but I would gladly pay the 5 per cent contribution if the above mentioned suggestions were enacted into law.

Extra Half Holiday Would Not Cost Government a Cent, Says Correspondent.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The most amusing thing that has appeared in the press for many a year is the report of the Budget Bureau to the effect that a weekly half holiday the year round to Government employes would cost approximately $27,000,000. The bureau must know that it would not cost a penny.

This estimated cost can be predicated on nothing else than the assumption that it would be necessary to employ additional help to do this half day's work. Every Government employe, from the highest official down to the charwoman, knows that it would not be necessary to employ a single additional clerk; that the same amount of work now done would be accomplished in five and one-half days that is now done in six, and all by the same employes.

In view of this well-known fact, Congress should request a detailed statement showing how the Budget Bureau arrived at its estimated cost. It should then call before it some of our leading business executives who have for years granted their employes a half holiday on Saturday the year round and ascertain from them whether the premise on which the bureau's estimate is based is sound. If this is done there will be no doubt of the Government employes getting a half holiday the year round. Instead of it costing a single dollar I am confident that such an inquiry will show that the Government would actually gain by the experiment.

EVENTS OF INTEREST IN SOCIETY CIRCLES OF CAPITAL

Senora Padilla Decorated by King of Spain

Order of Queen Maria Luisa Conferred on Envoy's Wife.

COINCIDENT with the celebration in Madrid today of the Queen's Feast Day, when tribute from Spanish subjects will be paid Queen Victoria, announcement is made in Washington of the honor conferred recently by the Spanish King and Queen upon Senora Dona Carmen Satrustegui de Padilla, wife of the Ambassador of Spain, who reached the Capital on Sunday with the ambassador and their daughters from a summer holiday in their homeland.

A few weeks before her departure for America Senora de Padilla was decorated with the Royal Order of Queen Maria Luisa, one of the ancient and most coveted decorations conferred by the Spanish monarch. The order was founded by King Charles IV in 1794 and bears extraordinary distinction bestowed by the crown of Spain.

A great friend of the royal family, Senora de Padilla enjoys close contact with the Queen of Spain, and during her summers abroad generally passes much of her time at San Sebastian, the little Spanish town in a landlocked harbor on the Bay of Biscay, where the court takes its summer holiday. Senorita Rosa Padilla and Senorita Maria Padilla, who passed many hours of their childhood in games with the royal infantas, often join in the court festivities that dot the gay days of the young people about the royal palace in Madrid.

Still another link binds the Ambassador and Senora de Padilla to the Court of Spain. For Baron Satrustegui, father of Senora de Padilla, is chamberlain of the court, and the baroness is one of Queen Victoria's attendants when the Spanish court is in residence each summer at San Sebastian. The baron and baroness make their home in the picturesque Basque country, where for generations their family has occupied the ancestral villa built into the rock of Mount Urgell.

Mrs. Hoover To Entertain For Son, Allan

Dinner and Dance at White House on December 30.

Mrs. Hoover will be hostess at dinner December 30, to a group of young people, friends of her son, Mr. Allan Hoover, preceding the dance to be given at the White House that night, for which invitations have just been issued. Although the cards, sent out to a limited number, bore Mrs. Hoover's name, the dance will honor her son, who recently arrived from Harvard for the holidays.

As the young people who received the coveted cards, look forward to the party, which, of course, forms the high spot of the vacation days for college groups, they recall the gay time had last year in the dazzling east room where Allan Hoover was host at a dance. That dancing party was one of the hurriedly gotten up affairs which delight the snappy young set, always ready for the next gay event.

Of informal character, as all invitations were sent by telephone, even the leader of the fashionable orchestra engaged for the party, made a rapid change of plans when "commands" came from the White House. His orchestra engaged a month ahead by a prominent Capital hostess, the tactful conductor, nothing daunted, dispatched one orchestra to the lady's ball at a large hotel and accompanied the other to the White House, where he conducted jazz music through the evening, going afterward to rejoin his orchestra at the hotel.

Mr. Hoover's affair for dancing is the source of much pleasure for his Washington friends, delighted, of course, to be bidden to the White House. During the administration of President Coolidge, his son, John, entertained but little, having but one or two friends at dinner, perhaps, while at home on vacation from college.

Senator Samuel M. Shortridge, of Menlo Park, Calif., has moved to Wardman Park Hotel, where he has leased an apartment.

Senator and Mrs. Ben Williamson, who are making their home at the Willard during the session of Congress, have left for their home in Kentucky and will not return to Washington until after the new year.

Among others of the congressional set who reside at the Willard and who will also spend the holidays at their homes are Mrs. A. R. Robinson, of Indiana; J. G. Townsend, jr., of Delaware; Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York; Senator A. R. Gould, of Maine; Senator Kenneth McKellar, of Tennessee; Senator Robert J. Bulkley, of Ohio; Representative M. C. Wright, of Georgia; Representative Robert L. Hogg, of West Virginia; Representative G. N. Haugen, of Iowa, and Representative Isaac H. Deutrich, of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Robert Scotten, First Secretary of the American Embassy in Paris, and Mrs. Scotten, who have been staying at the Plaza-Athenee, are planning to occupy their new home in the due de l'Universite in Paris shortly before Christmas.

Miss Miriam Mohler has returned from Boston to be with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. John R. Mohler, for the holidays.

The Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Frederick H. Payne will be honor guests of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. John W. Gulick at dinner preceding the second of the series of Army dances at the Willard Friday, January 2.

The Assistant Secretary and Mrs. Payne will have with them for the Christmas vacation their daughter, Miss Carolyn Payne, from Vassar, and their son, Mr. Groverman Payne, from the University of Virginia.

The oldest son of the Assistant Secretary and Mrs. Payne, Mr. Frederick B. Payne and Mrs. Payne, of New York, will arrive the latter part of the week to spend New Year's Day with the Paynes.

Ruth Bryant Makes Her Bow At Tea Dance

Miss Fortescue Also Is Presented; Dinner for Miss Hoehling.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Herbert Bryant, of Alexandria, Va., presented their daughter, Miss Ruth Bryant, to Washington society at a tea dance yesterday afternoon at the Mayflower.

The guests from the young society group in the Capital, with whom the debutante has a wide acquaintance, were received in the Chinese room of the hotel, and dancing followed in the grand ballroom.

Miss Bryant wore a gown of cloth of gold made with long, tight-fitting sleeves, and carried an arm bouquet of talisman roses. Assisting her were Miss Georgette Yerby, Miss Helen Lee Eames Doherty, Miss Helen Lee Washington, Miss Elizabeth Edson, Miss Eleanor Calvert and Miss Margaret Calvert. Miss Dorothy Dodge, Miss Margene Musser, Miss Devereux Green, Miss Elizabeth Dunlop, Miss Lalla Lynn and her house guests, Miss Anita Bradshaw, of Morristown, N. J., and Miss Charlotte Williams, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Langbourne Meade Williams, of Richmond, Va.

Mrs. Bryant's assistants included her sisters, Mrs. Archibald R. Hoxton, of Alexandria, Va., and Mrs. Andrew Calhoun Pickens, wife of Capt. Pickens, U. S. N.; also Mrs. John Downs, wife of Capt. Downs, U. S. N.; Mrs. William Laird Dunlop, Jr., and Mrs. Richard Henry Lynn.

Red roses and white stevia with tall red candles were used on the tea table.

The United States Minister to Honduras and Mrs. Julius S. Lay have returned to the Mayflower from a new York trip and will remain in Washington until the end of the month.

Miss Helen L. MacG. Strauss will leave to spend Christmas with her brother and sister-in-law, Lieut. and Mrs. Elliott B. Strauss, at their home in Newport. She will be away two weeks.

Parents Honor Miss Birdsall With Big Ball

400 Attend Brilliant Event; Dance for Miss Korff.

Dr. and Mrs. Gregg C. Birdsall were hosts at a large ball last evening in the grand ballroom of the Mayflower for their debutante daughter, Miss Mary Stuart Birdsall, who was formally presented to their many friends in Washington at a reception given at their home on Thanksgiving.

The hosts and their daughter were assisted in receiving their guests, numbering approximately 400, from the young society group of the Capital by Miss Louise Rich, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Thaddeus Rich, of Philadelphia.

Miss Birdsall's frock was a Lanvin model of shell pink taffeta, with a fitted bodice and very full, long skirt made entirely of tiny ruffles. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet of pink roses, violets, forget-me-nots and lilies of the valley.

A seated supper was served shortly after midnight in the presidential dining room of the hotel.

Preceding the ball Baroness Korff entertained at dinner at the Mayflower for her debutante daughter, Miss Barbara Korff, who is home for the holidays.

With the above hand played at Auction Bridge, South bid one Diamond, West one Spade, North and East passed, South bid two Diamonds, and West obtained the contract with a bid of two Spades.

At Contract Bridge, South would bid two Diamonds, West two Spades, North pass, and East four Spades.

In the play North led the Jack of Diamonds; South won with the Queen (North's Jack might have been a singleton) and followed with the King and then the Ace of Diamonds. West trumped the third Diamond with the Ace of Spades, shutting out an overruff by North; led two Spades to exhaust adverse trumps; then led the Nine of Hearts and finessed, playing the Eight from dummy. South won with the Jack and led a Club. We won and took a second Heart finesse which also lost, this time to South's King; so the game went a-glimmering.

THE CORRECT PLAY.

This is an easy elimination situation. All that West had to do after drawing the trumps was to lead the Ace and King of Clubs, put East in with a Spade to lead a third Club, ruff it in closed hand and then lead the Heart and take a double finesse by passing the Nine or Ten up to the South hand. After that Declarer could not lose a trick no matter how the adversaries played.

If South led a Diamond or a Club, one hand would ruff and the other would discard a Heart; if he led a Heart, it would be up to the Ace-Queen. All Declarer needed was to be sure that he would not lose two Heart tricks; the elimination made that a cinch.

Jean Interprets the MODE

Redfern's black fantasy wool coat is very smart indeed with its small cape and modified dolman sleeves.

Paris, Dec. 22.

MILADI ELEGANTE today is femininity's most frail and fashionable self! The lines of her gowns, gracious, suave, softly clinging, reveal her as a womanly woman—not a brisk and hoydenish flapper. And the charm and brilliance of her accessories show that she has suffered no loss of individuality in her acceptance of more feminine garments!

And heaven pity the poor male, says we—for he not only pays the bills for the glowing elegance, but must withstand the lure and cajolery of sparkling eyes which are millions of times more effective than ever—as they peep over the screen of woman's most deadly weapon, a feathered fan. Yes, they're back again, more luxuriantly trailing, more brilliantly colored and more appropriately handled today than ever before against their background of flowing lines.

Uncurled ostrich is, of course, the most frequently used feather, and it is hard to find a more graceful one. I saw such an adorable turquoise one, wielded by a lovely lady in black and rose velvet. And a stately, white-haired erect lady, dignified in black velvet, carried a brilliant rose-crimson fan of three long bird-of-paradise plumes on ebony and rhinestone sticks!

• • • •

Ties an' socks and shirts and scarves! 'N' over again every single Christmas until the problem of what is new to give a man is the biggest and most bothersome of every Lovely Lady's worries. The difficulty of breaking away from the cycle was enormous, but after much deep thought I solved it. Yes, my deahs, and I sat me down and wrote out my ideas as they came to me, and the result is a leaflet just crammed full of original and delightful gift suggestions for men. Hurry—the Dare department of The Washington Post has a copy ready to rush right to you when they get your stamped, self-addressed envelope. 'N' you and the men who get gifts from you will bless the day when something was really done about gifts for men that are really different.

• • •

'N' here's another charming version of the ensemble idea that I sketch for you today! The bag is incrusted in three colors, and the umbrella handle enameled three colors, to match.

• • • •

One just couldn't do common, garden variety every-day things in a coat as chic as this one of Redfern, now could one? Not that there's anything impractical about it, for it's made of black fantasy wool, but the astonishing grace of its little cape and dolman sleeves which are snugly tight from elbow to wrist would make any event a happy and out-of-the-ordinary event by its swanky, youthful flare. I showed it to you today to prove what miracles can be wrought from any fabric by the magic "line."

Only in The Washington Post, in the Capital, does Dare's weekly fashion letter appear each Sunday.

Au revoir!

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

VITAMINS.

A CORRESPONDENT recently asked what a vitamin is, and whether it was detected by sight, odor or what. I replied that there were no chemical or microscopical tests for vitamins; they can not be detected by sight or odor; the only methods of testing them are what are known as biological methods.

An anonymous correspondent jumped into the fray by saying that my answer was "as clear as mud to a layman," such as he was. I am sure he is right. The subject comes pretty near being as clear as mud to everybody. We needed no Einstein to make the vitamin question as clear as mud.

Nobody has ever seen a vitamin, nor tested one, nor smelled one. There are no chemical reactions for vitamins, and the microscope does not show them. If there is anything to measure or weigh nobody has ever found it. Nobody is certain whether a vitamin is a thing or a force. Until you know which it is how can you explain it without being as clear as mud? Suppose you try to explain electricity fundamentally, or some other agency which may be a force, or a principle, and nothing more.

About all we know about vitamins is that when animals are fed in a certain way, or exposed to sunlight in a certain way, something happens. We measure what happens. We measure what has been fed. From these experiences we conclude, let us say, that in some foods there are particular qualities, and that they are there in certain proportions. Finally, by observation, comparison and reasoning, we decide that some foods have vitamins in certain proportions.

Continuing the same line of observation, comparison and reasoning, we arrive at the conclusion that there are four to eight, or maybe more, according to how they are classified; that they are present in some particular foods, in certain amounts; and there are needs for them. Since lower animals are more easily controlled, and since their span of life is shorter, lower animals are used instead of man.

But, after all, we are doing more than measuring the effects of vitamins. We do not know how to start measuring vitamins themselves except through their effects. But isn't the same true of electricity?

This statement has taken 50 words for each one used in the statement complained of. I expect it is just as muddy as the first one was. Isn't the trouble with the state of the science? May vitamins share with electricity the fourth dimension, the quality of being incurably muddy? And it will so remain until we know more about the boundaries between force and matter.

HAS REMEDY FOR ITCH.

Mrs. C. W. writes:

I frequently read of people asking what to do for itch after bathing in the winter time.

I bathe the body with a few drops of hand lotion—one-third of glycerin and two-thirds bay rum. I rub it in with a towel and use a good grade of talcum.

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES M'DONALD

More In-Law Blues.

DEAR FRANCES McDonald: I have no living relatives of my own, therefore I wanted all the more to get on with my in-laws. But now I've stopped trying. I have duties, joys, peace of mind, friends, a happy home of my own. Yet everyone I know has a circle of kin-folk and gets along in more or less harmony with them. And I would gladly do likewise, that is, give and take with my in-laws, if only the scales didn't so often hold gold on one side and copper on the other.

For instance, I have two sisters-in-law. One had a habit of boasting of her money in every letter, but every present from her was always something out of the 5-10-25 cent store. Finally a pair of 25 cent paper booties arrived for my baby girl and with it, a scrap of paper on which was scrawled in pencil—"for the new baby."

The careless air of it hurt me more than the useless gift, and I sent no sweet note of thanks as usual, and no carefully planned, hand-made gift in return, as usual. Soon came a letter beginning—"Well, have you forgotten how to write?" Then followed another financial statement, and in closing was the ultimatum if I didn't answer soon she wouldn't write again. I didn't. And that ended it. The other sister was not at all selfish, but she always tried to make rude comebacks to every friendly gesture. I remarked to her once, we'd gladly welcome her steady boy-chum to our home. She flung right back at me, "But maybe he won't 'wanna' come here!"

It was good riddance perhaps.

It was no doubt good riddance too, when that prodigal of old went away. But that inspiring story goes on to tell how the father—an old man—came running—to forgive him while the prodigal was yet a long way off. Somehow, half of all religion seems to be love. And the other half forgive. But I often wonder what happened after the fatted calf was all eaten up. How did they make a go of things after that?

And now—when our own prodigal or prodigals come back, as they surely will, forgiveness, of course, is a foregone conclusion. But after that—just what will it take to bring about even a little better balance in our give-and-take in the future?

WONDERING, BUT HOPEFUL.

Well, in the first place, realize that they are not by nature constituted as you are. You have been trying to make a silk purse out of a sow's ear. It can not be done. They are crude. You are sensitive. They can not be considerate. They can not be changed. You must take them as they are or forget them. And we would be in favor of forgetting them! A circle of kin may be desirable under some circumstances, and distinctly undesirable under other circumstances. Many of us find ourselves suddenly bereft by life of all the dear ones who once made up our world. But we do not try to fill their places with whatever offers in the way of human kind. Instead, we cherish just a little more what happens to be ours—home, love, friends. And that is what you must do. That dear old man who killed the fatted calf probably had to listen to a daily recital of how fatted calf should be served, and how it was served in the Ritz of that day, and he did not even dare to mention those husks that followed after the Ritz parties. Life does not change much with the times. Prodigals are prodigals and come and go and make plenty of trouble. Serve the fatted calf to your friends and do not weep over the lack of prodigals!

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

PLEASE tell me where to keep an indoor hydrangea, also a cyclamen. The latter is in full bloom. I know it has a rest period, but when? Does a strawberry geranium require more water than the ordinary varieties of geraniums? Should I remove the runners which appear from time to time? MRS. C. G. S.

Keep hydrangea in the sun and water it thoroughly once a day. Give it plenty of fresh air and stir the soil in the pot about once a week. Being almost an aquatic, the cyclamen must have water—not only a little, but a great deal. If the soil in which you have it growing is permitted to become dry for a half day the growth of the plant will be materially checked, and it may take six months to recover from the effects. While the plant demands light, it abhors strong sunlight. If you care to write again, inclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope, we shall be glad to send you a circular on the "Care of Cyclamen." As a rule, the cyclamen rests from late February until August.

Please tell me how to care for a Christmas cactus. MRS. G. P.

Keep plant in a warm, well-ventilated place and water it every other day until it begins to set buds, when it must be watered thoroughly every day. When the first bud appears the plant should be given bonemeal or liquid manure.

Please tell me the name of the plant from which these seeds were taken. May I plant the seed at this time in the open ground? MRS. R. L.

It is impossible to identify a plant from a seed. I am sure in your Northern climate the ground would be frozen at this time. Better plant seed when weather permits in the spring.

Please tell me when to plant hyacinths and tulips in order to have them in bloom for Christmas?

A. F. H.

It is impossible to force tulips or hyacinths into bloom for Christmas. You see, they must be kept in the dark for at least eight weeks for a development of their root system. After they are brought to the light it takes some time for the tops to develop. Even the florists are rarely able to force any hyacinths except the Roman varieties before January.

Will you kindly send me the name of the product which will cause leaves to decay so that they may be used for fertilizer? Also, tell me if a honeysuckle vine four years old should have flowers. HERBERT D.

We are sorry, but it is impossible to give trade names in this column. The product to which you refer is a proprietary preparation. If you care to write again, inclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope, I shall be glad to send you the name of the preparation. A honeysuckle four years old should bloom.

My hardy chrysanthemums, as you will see by examining the inclosed leaves, are attacked by an insect or a form of blight. I have sprayed them with several reliable sprays, but still the trouble exists. This year the plants were moved to a different location, but the blight is worse than ever. M. C. C.

Spray the plants at this time with bordeaux mixture. Literally soak the soil in the spring. Before growth starts, give the plants another spraying with same material. Also incorporate some dry bordeaux mixture with the soil in which the plants are growing.

(Copyright, 1930.)

All readers' questions on growing and care of indoor and outdoor flowers and floral decorations for social functions will be answered by Miss Kift, directly in this column if addressed in care of The Washington Post, or directly to readers if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is supplied.

What Today Means to You

By MARY BLAKE

"CAPRICORN."

IF December 23 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8 a. m. to 10 a. m. from 1 p. m. to 2 p. m. and from 7 p. m. to 8 p. m. The adverse periods are from 3:30 p. m. to 5 p. m. and from 9 p. m. to 10 p. m.

You will not consider yourself "lucky" on this date, no matter what your good fortunes may be, for the astrological influences will fill your mind with discontentment. Anxiety concerning relatives, or differences of opinions with such. Preconceived plans will not be interfered with, and their fulfillment should be an easy accomplishment.

Children born on this December 23 will have persevering natures, tidy habits, and studious minds. They will have high ambitions, and will be willing to pay the price for their fulfillment. They will be sympathetic, warm-hearted and generous.

You have a highly sensitive and mobile nature, and though your manner is somewhat detached and supercilious, you exert an undeniable fascination over those who know you at all well. It is no effort for you to keep people at a comfortable distance, and you quickly squash any attempted undesirable familiarity without offending the would-be intruder. There is an affectation about you. You care too little for the opinions of others to trouble about maintaining any pose.

You are an indefatigable student; your mind is ever eager for knowledge, and you will devote much time to the study of various interests outside of what you consider to be your serious work. Your hands may not always be busy, but your brain seldom takes a rest, and you are in no sense an idler. You are not emotionless, but your emotions are, in the main, intellectual.

You are fitted for work which requires an inquisitive mind, such as the legal or medical professions. You should make a good amateur musician, a clever correspondent, an interesting and intelligent conversationalist, and more than the average sportsman. You have spiritual and religious longings, which your church will not be able to fill, and you will never accept any given creeds and doctrines. You are a true worshipper of nature.

YOUR NAME
What Does It Mean?

By HARRY A. DEFERRARI, Ph. D.

THE family name "Levin" (also spelled "Levine" and "Levene") has come down to us from the common Anglo-Saxon personal name "Loefwine," which means "beloved friend." This name occurs very often in the Hundred Rolls, a famous list of English names of the thirteenth century. A few of its more common spellings in that document are "Lefwyne," "Leffeyne," "Lewine" and "Lewyn." Jewish families have frequently adopted the many variations of this name because of the resemblance to the Hebrew name "Levi."

The personal and family name "Levi" is of Hebrew origin, and may be translated "joined" or "joining." Its commonest variations are "Levy," "Lewy" and "Levin." However, the family name "Levin" may be traced back to an English source, also.

The family name "Bloch" (also spelled "Block") is generally of German origin. It frequently means "the plump person" and "the dull person," having been originally given as a nickname. In some cases it is a Jewish dialect form meaning "the foreigner." It is also found as an early English name of Dutch origin. In this case its meaning is generally "the dull person" or "the stupid person."

The family name "Viaut" (also spelled "Viâut," "Viault" and "Viau") may be traced back to three French sources. In many cases it was originally applied as a nickname with the meaning of "the old man." Another frequent source is the Latin personal name "Vitalis," which may be translated "full of life." According to a third source, its full significance is "he who lives near the road."

Jean's Santa Claus

By JULIE ANNE MOORE

CHAPTER XXXII.

Not for a long, long time were the events of Tuesday, the 23d, to be made plausible to Jean Melba. And even then, when she could look back and distinguish between cause and effect, she was to be but vaguely suspicious of the important role played by Mollie in the amazing proceedings.

Mollie had arrived before Jean was up and had banged on the door until she had been admitted.

"Say," Mollie had demanded, laughing, unbelievably slim in a new mink coat, "what's the big idea locking me out of my own room? And what are you sleeping a perfectly swell day away for? Don't you know it's almost Christmas?"

Jean had not explained that she had not slept at all, but since dawn had lay on her bed gazing at the once white ceiling. Mollie would not understand that, she thought. So she simply smiled and proceeded to get into her clothes.

Mollie had news. Lionel had arranged for the three of them to take a hop in a plane at Curtiss Field.

"He's having something done to the car, honey. By the time we run around the corner and get a snack, he'll be here. Make it snappy!"

At first Jean had refused. She did not, she told Mollie, like or trust airplanes. Moreover, she was tired and preferred to stay in her room. But there was no denying Mollie, and when at last she had agreed to go, she tried to persuade herself that it was for the best. Anything was better than sitting alone, eating her heart out.

So they had packed themselves into Lionel's roadster and gone to Curtiss Field and Jean had had her first view of a modern airport where airplanes come and go with the regularity of trains. Little planes out of which helmeted heads stuck shot across the ground and rose with a suddenness that made Jean gasp. Great broad-winged craft moved more leisurely, rose more leisurely, but with equal grace. Motors roared, clouds of dust rose high in their wake as the bird-like machines sped over the earth and moved off into space. And all as casually as though it were quite an ordinary, uninteresting spectacle.

And then Lionel had come out of a small white building with a be-spectacled young man with a blonde moustache who promptly led them to such a plane as Jean had seen leave the field a few minutes before. Mollie had climbed into the cabin first, then Jean, leaving Lionel outside with the young man of the blonde moustache. But a moment later Mollie had whispered quickly, "Ye gods! I've got his money!" and had run back to the door and climbed out again.

Then had begun the last chapter of Jean's amazing adventure, and, in fact, the only adventure of the sort for which she had wished that night when she and Phillip had slipped down the valley after the Torrington-Winsted football game aeons ago.

* * * *

No sooner had Mollie disappeared through the open door than the door slammed behind her and with a great roar the big ship began to move. Hardly realizing what had happened, Jean clung to her seat and pressed her face to the window in a vain effort to see Mollie and Lionel.

The earth raced by. A young fellow in blue overalls waved cheerily to the pilot in the compartment ahead, and was quickly lost in view.

It occurred to Jean then that if she could attract the pilot's attention she could make him understand that he had left two of his passengers. She looked about quickly for a bell button such as are found in Pullmans, but there were none. Frantic by now, she half rose from her seat, intending to walk forward and knock on the thin glass door that separated her from the pilot, but at that moment the balance of the plane seemed to change, giving her a sensation of being thrown forward, and she dropped back into her chair, bracing against the chair ahead.

Presently the scraping noise she had heard at first ceased. Cautiously, she peered out the window. What appeared to be the roof of a house swept by beneath them. She drew back, frightened. They were in the air!

Not knowing anything at all about modern transport planes, Jean might eventually have made her way to the pilot and explained the situation. But the best of air vehicles have a disconcerting way of suddenly rising under one's chair and as suddenly dropping again, which is no great worry to the initiate, but is likely to discourage much running around on the part of a young woman who is taking her first flight, and under trying circumstances at that.

So Jean accepted the situation and consoled herself with the obvious fact that what goes up must come down, and that very soon they would be on the ground again and she would enjoy a good laugh at the expense of Mollie and Lionel who by this time must be in a fine rage.

That they had long, long since left Curtiss field a mere speck in the distance she did not know, of course. It did occur to her once that they had been up for quite a long time, but having no watch she was forced to attribute this suspicion to an overwrought imagination.

And then, when she least expected it, the big plane's nose dropped, the roar subsided, and they came down, suddenly, swiftly, gracefully, skimmed over the ground for a space and abruptly settled.

Jean saw the door opening and ran to it, calling Mollie's name, and laughing delightedly. And then, as the door swung wide, she jumped. Jumped straight into the arms of a tall, good-looking young man with the merriest of eyes, who said gayly:

"Heaven has nothing to offer after this. I'll bet you didn't even know whose arms you were diving into."

"Sandy! * * *" Jean cried weakly. "I didn't know you were coming out. Where're Mollie and Lionel?"

"Way * * * I thought they were coming with you."

"They did come with me," Jean declared, "but that silly pilot went off before they had gotten aboard. I left them here * * * somewhere."

"Here?" Sandy asked, confused. And then, laughing softly, he asked: "Where do you think you are, Jean? At Curtiss Field * * *?"

Jean nodded, "Of course. At least Lionel said that was the name of it."

For a long moment Sandy stared at her incredulously. Then softly: "You took off from Curtiss Field, Jean, but this * * this is the Boston airport. * * * Please * * * don't look at me so * * * I give you my word of honor I'm not responsible."

"But how * * * Why * * * I don't understand. * * * They said we were going up for a little ride * * *"

"Then your explanation is a good as mine," he told her. "Unless they meant to surprise you. Surely you understand I shouldn't have * * * planned anything of the kind. It was to be a party. Just a simple little farewell party to please Dad. He had hoped to get down to New York yesterday, and when he found he couldn't, he suggested I ask you to come here, to Boston, to thank you for what you did with the Miniature Baby Plan * * * you know * * * I meant to tell you yesterday, but when I had given out the gold pieces you were not there."

There was that desperate look in his eyes again. Jean turned away quickly. "I * * * I had to leave," she said quietly.

"I know," Sandy nodded, solemnly. "That's the reason I didn't go to your room and tell you last night. * * * But it occurred to me that if we made it a party with Lionel and Mollie, you * * * wouldn't mind. * * * Dad is so anxious to see you, Jean. He's carried away with the success of his plan * * * and he wants to show his gratitude."

The big transport had taxied off to a point farther along the starting line and now stood silent and still, gazing across the floor-like field. Other planes hummed before the hangars, and now and then one went running off with lifted tail, presently to go sailing upward.

"I can't insist, Jean," Sandy said huskily. "I know how you feel about * * * things. We might go in for lunch, and see Dad and mother * * * and Ellen. But if you'd rather not, there's another plane leaving shortly. You can be back in New York by 3 * * *"

For the moment Jean had forgotten that Ellen was now in Boston. She said quickly, "Is Ellen's new home near your father's?"

"You mean * * * it was your father and mother who adopted her * * *?"

"Yes, Jean. * * * And they're mad about her already."

"But why did you pretend it was some one else? You made me think * * *"

Sandy asked firmly, "Have I had an opportunity to explain anything to you in the last few days, Jean?" And when she only stared at him: "When I first arranged it, I still had * * * Oh, what's the use of all this evasion? I had hopes that I might bring you back to Boston * * * for good, and * * * well, Ellen was just one of the little surprises I had planned. * * *"

His words, and the agony of his eyes cut like a knife. In an instant she was back where she had been days before, her hard won victory over her heart forgotten.

She said, uncertainly * * * "I'm sorry Sandy * * * I think you might forgive me everything if * * * if you knew what I'd been through these last few days * * * I'd like to see your father and Ellen again * * * and I'd like to know your mother. But * * * I've won my battle once, Sandy. And I couldn't again. You understand that, don't you? * * * Conscience is an ugly thing, Sandy. When it's satisfied, all the rest of us is utterly miserable. I've made a promise, and I mustn't break it. If I ever left this field with you, I'd be * * * beaten. * * *"

Somewhere a motor started up, a bass roar that rose and fell spasmodically. A group of civilians trailed out of a little building, some carrying traveling bags, and walked off toward the waiting plane.

Sandy's voice, hoarse and uncertain, was barely audible.

"You mean you would marry this other man even though you love * * * me?"

Jean said hopelessly, "I promised him, Sandy * * *

"And supposed something happened to you, through no fault of your own so that you would not be in New York Christmas morning, when he went for you * * * ?"

It was the tone of his voice that frightened her. She drew away from him uneasily. "But * * * but nothing must happen. Nothing can happen. Unless, of course * * *" with the suggestion of a smile * * * "unless the plane falls, and that might be the best way out. * * *"

Gently he slipped an arm through hers, and raised his free hand in an odd gesture. From a line af automobiles parked by the little building that served as a waiting room emerged a long, shiny limousine. Quickly it moved down the starting line and came to a stop immediately behind them.

Jean, completely bewildered, turned in time to see the chauffeur jump to the ground and open the back door. Then she looked up at Sandy, curiously.

"Strange things do happen sometimes, Jean," he told her, an odd light in his laughing eyes, "and frequently through no fault of our own. You wouldn't believe me, for example, if I told you that it is possible for a young lady to be kidnaped in broad daylight at the Boston airport, but it's true, nevertheless, and to prove my point * * *"

It was done before she realized what he was saying. In a flash he had swept her from her feet and, holding her in his arms as easily as though she had been one of her miniature babies, he stepped into the waiting machine and gave a short, sharp command to the amazed chauffeur.

Guiding Your Child

By MRS. AGNES LYNE.

Not a Mixer.

Edward's mother, a gay and social person, is troubled because her son has so few friends and cares so little for the usual social preoccupations of his age.

She feels that there must be something the matter with a 15-year-old boy who takes no interest in school social affairs, who belongs to no "crowd," who prefers the quiet companionship of one or two boys to all the gayety which she herself enjoyed.

She fails to realize that not all children are by temperament good mixers.

Some find their greatest satisfactions not in sports and other typically youthful diversions but in the pursuit of individual hobbies, in the excitement of the world of ideas.

It is not possible to pour child nature into any particular mold but parents continue to make the mistake of trying to do so.

In the matter of the child's social life they can only offer him every opportunity for contacts and then stand aside while he makes his own choices.

If he shows the capacity to make and keep even a few friends there is nothing to worry about. Provided he is able adequately to meet his world at other points he is in no danger of becoming a "shut-in" personality.

If he is busy, interested in his chosen pursuits, able to meet school standards of work and conduct, reasonably cooperative and responsible at home, his unsocial attitude may be indicative of nothing more than an exceptional degree of intelligence and self-sufficiency.

Under such circumstances certainly it is only sensible to permit him to work out his social life in accordance with his individual preferences.

Hollywood Screen Life

By HUBBARD KEAVY.

Hollywood—Surely it must be a coincidence that for the second time within a year Richard Barthelmess is starring in the same type of picture that Howard Hughes, the movies' multi-millionaire boy producer, is making.

Just when Hughes was getting ready to show his so expensively made "Hell's Angles," Barthelmess' "The Dawn Patrol," also an air picture, was released.

RICHARD BARTHELMESS

Now both are preparing newspaper stories. Barthelmess will be a reporter in his next, so far untitled, on which actual filming starts after the first of the year.

And Hughes is selecting players for the film version of "The Front Page," that boisterous story laid in Chicago's criminal court building.

Different.

As a rule, Hollywood does not lightly accept criticism that comes from within the industry, which is one of the reasons why Harold Lloyd will avoid repetition in his next comedy.

"Feet First," the bespectacled one's last film, devoted considerable footage to the funny business of hanging on the side of a building, and, although hair-raising, it reminded spectators of a similar episode in that silent thriller, "Safety Last." In that Lloyd played around on a skyscraper and on the hands of a huge clock.

The comment here on "Feet First" centered on Lloyd's failure to introduce new means of making celluloid whoopee, a virtue that has been his heretofore.

I don't think Lloyd's followers again will see him exhibit the same weakness. He is working on a story idea now, I am told, that when developed will contain no suggestions of "old gags."

Amputation.

One of those real life tragedies that happen every so often in Hollywood came to light when Edgar Murray, a character actor, had to have one of his legs amputated.

A few months ago he was unable to play a role because the script called for, and the director demanded, a one-legged man.

Uncle Sam's Home Hints

NUT-COATED MARSHMALLOWS.
(U. S. Department of Agriculture.)

1 cup of blanched almonds.
1 cup of pecan kernels.
1 cup of English walnut kernels.
1½ teaspoons salt.
2 cups of medium brown sugar.
2-3 of a cup of water.
1½ pounds or 120 marshmallows.

Chop the nuts very fine. Shake them through a sieve, so the pieces will be the same size. Add the salt to the chopped nuts and stir well. Make a sirup of the brown sugar and water, boiling it until it "threads" from the spoon. Remove the saucepan from the flame and set in a larger vessel of hot water. At once drop the marshmallows one by one into the hot sirup using forks to handle them. Remove the marshmallows promptly. Roll them at once in the chopped nuts. Place on oiled paper to dry. If the sirup gets so cool that it begins to harden, place it over the flame to reheat. Do not allow it to come to a boil. If there is a coating of loose starch or powdered sugar on the marshmallows brush or shake it off before dipping them in the sirup.

CARTER REINSTATES BOYS WHO MARRIED

Relents After Finding Only One Apprentice Had Found New Job.

WARNS ABOUT FUTURE

Moved by the Christmas spirit, Public Printer George H. Carter yesterday reinstated seven young apprentice printers who were dismissed recently for violating a rule forbidding marriage. Two of the young men are fathers, and only one of the seven had been able to find another job, Mr. Carter said.

"In view of their hardships and the unemployment situation," he explained, "I decided to restore them to duty. Hereafter, however, the rule against apprentice marriages will be rigidly enforced."

The reinstated apprentices are Raymond E. Geegh, 19 years old; Ronald E. Hudgins, 22; Lloyd Traynor, 20; George W. Taylor, 20; Vincent H. Reid, 21; Eric Gaffield, 20, and Harry E. Finley, 20. They were all penalized by having their training status set back six months. Most of them had been out of work for a number of weeks.

In championing his "fatherly" supervision of the training school, Mr. Carter said:

"The Government owes a certain obligation to the parents of these young men, many of whom come from distant points. They must be looked after and given advice during their period of training."

He said that he would "give consideration" to fourth-year apprentices who wish to get married, but would not permit underclassmen to wed under any conditions.

Mr. Carter also expressed his objections to students taking outside work, or studying any subject not connected with the printing trade.

Columbia Island Road, Linking Spans, Finished

A passable road across Columbia Island, linking the Arlington Memorial Bridge and the short bridge that spans Boundary channel, has been completed, it was announced yesterday, but it will not be opened for public use until next fall. The road is intended to aid construction activities.

Officials of the Arlington Memorial Bridge Commission are now studying the best type of paving for the bridge. The probability that horses from Fort Myer will use the structure is being taken into consideration.

Ten Thousand Kansas and Oklahoma Independent Oil Producers Face Ruin

Yesterday's Associated Press carried news that an investigation of the U. S. Geological Survey indicated the imminent extinction of 10,000 or more small independent oil producers in Kansas and Oklahoma, due to the inability of one company, the Prairie Oil and Gas Company, to continue the marketing of their oil. The Prairie market has been absorbed and destroyed by the flood of cheap foreign oil dumped upon the markets of this country in an ever swelling tide.

The destruction in Kansas and Oklahoma is typical of the plight of many thousands of small independent producers in all the oil States of the Union. Dependent communities like our own in the great midcontinent have watched their own oil held back, their storage capacity exhausted and their prices fall continually while the cheap oil from foreign countries excluded them from the American market. During the depression they have been hanging on by a thread in the hope that their Government would save them by serving and preserving to them our domestic market for oil, inherently theirs. They form the bone and sinew of the oil producing industry and are entitled to survive under the form and plan of government in this country. Hundreds of cities and communities in Kansas, Oklahoma and the other great oil producing States are dependent upon their continued existence. They can not face present conditions much longer and survive.

A Tariff on Oil is the Only Remedy

The quoted statements of Secretary Wilbur and Doctor Smith recognize the impending economic loss to the whole country if prompt and adequate relief is withheld. They also acknowledge governmental inability to act in this emergency except in an advisory capacity.

Communities like our own, in the oil producing States, which have suffered directly from the hardships faced by the independent producers, their operations shut down, their storage capacity exhausted and their markets taken away by cheap foreign oil, realize that their only means of relief is a tariff on oil enacted without delay. An oil tariff will save the American market for American oil. It will exclude the foreign surplus, and permit domestic production to take its place. This will relieve congested storage, and permit resumption of producing operations, thereby decreasing present unemployment. It will prevent the loss of thousands of small oil wells which otherwise will die from encroachment of water while idle.

No other measure will suffice, and nothing else will more quickly relieve the effects of depression throughout all the great oil producing States.

The tariff has been extended as an aid to agriculture and to industry generally and every sound reason exists for its enactment in the crisis now upon the independent oil producing industry. Without it, it faces ruin.

BUTLER FOOTBALL PLAN DECRIED AND APPLAUDED

Ingram Asked To Coach at California

Navy Mentor Offered 2-Year Contract, Is Report.

Said to Be on Coast for Parley; Annapolis Noncommittal.

BALTIMORE, Md., Dec. 22 (A.P.).—The Evening Sun said today that Navy Bill Ingram, who has completed a five-year contract as head football coach at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, may succeed Nibbs Price as coach at the University of California. Ingram was said to be on the West Coast now conferring with university officials in regard to the position, reported offered him several years ago when he was coaching at the University of Indiana.

"Navy Bill," a former football star at the academy, resigned from the service when he went to coach at Indiana, and left the latter institution to return to coach the Middies in 1926, turning out a national championship team. His brother, Commander Jonas Ingram, at that time was head of the academy athletic department.

The paper said "Navy Bill" had been offered a two-year renewal of his contract, which expired this season, but that he had not signed.

No Information at California U.

Berkeley, Calif., Dec. 22 (A.P.).—University of California officials had no information tonight concerning reports that "Navy Bill" Ingram, of the United States Naval Academy, was a candidate to succeed C. M. ("Nibs") Price as head football coach here.

It was pointed out Graduate Manager W. W. Monohan, of California, was the only person authorized to negotiate for a new coach, and he was in the East on this mission.

Navy Makes No Statement as to Ingram's Retention.

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 22.—Officials of the Navy Athletic Association had no statement to make tonight concerning whether William A. (Navy Bill) Ingram would return to Annapolis next season as head coach of the Navy football team, a post which he has held for the last five years. Nor would they affirm knowledge that the mentor was considering an offer from University of California.

Lieut. Comdr. Frederick G. Reinicke, director of football and graduate manager of athletics, said that the matter of coaching staff for the 1931 campaign is now under consideration and a decision would be made known within a short time. This coincided with the view expressed by Capt. Henry D. Cooke, athletic director.

Ingram is known to be held in high favor by the powers that be, and in the absence of an official statement, it is generally understood in local circles that he has been offered a contract for a two-year term. At one time report was current that Ingram contemplated giving up gridiron coaching to devote his entire time to business interests in the Midwest.

Ga. Tech to Abandon Relay Games for 1931

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 22 (A.P.).—The Tech relays, annual attraction for hundreds of athletes from the South and some from other sections, will be abandoned in 1931, athletic officials of Georgia Tech announced today.

Lack of public interest and support in Atlanta was given as the reason for discontinuing the ten-year-old spring meet.

7 Minutes of Action In Hour Grid Contest

East Lansing, Mich., Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Sixty minutes of play has been given a new meaning in football by a Michigan State College professor, who attends games with a stop-watch.

Prof. D. T. Ewing, of the college chemistry department, learns that the ball is in play only an average of seven minutes a game, actually. He obtains his calculation by measuring the time from the passing of the ball by the center to the sound of the referee's whistle ending the play.

A kick is in the air generally about four seconds and a line smash usually requires three or four seconds, he says.

O'Connor, Notre Dame, Spurns Pro Football

East Orange, N. J., Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Paul "Bucky" O'Connor, Notre Dame full back, who scored two touchdowns against Southern California, will never play pro football, he said today as he arrived home for the holidays and a civic reception.

Football is his favorite sport. He loves to play it and doesn't want to "commercialize" it, he explained.

O'Connor will graduate from Notre Dame in June and expects to enter Harvard Medical School.

O'Connor also made the statement he believed any good college team could beat the best of the professionals.

W. Jacobs Seeded No. 1 In Junior Net Tourney

New York, Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Drawings for the national junior and boys' indoor tennis championship, to be held in the Seventh Regiment Armory beginning on Friday, were made today at the offices of the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

William Jacobs, of Baltimore, the defending champion, has been seeded No. 1 in the junior championship. Jacobs, whose victory in the final round last year earned the team prize for Baltimore City College, is competing this year for the University of Pennsylvania.

Other seeded players are: Richard Downing, Jamaica High School, No. 2; March Hecht, Dewitt Clinton, No. 3; Bernard Friedman, West Philadelphia High School, No. 4; Kendall H. Cram, Nashville, Tenn., No. 5; Sidney Seligson, New York University, No. 6; Robert O. New Golf Ball Wins Favor Of Pros

Larger, Lighter Pellet Vindicated in Pasadena Open.

Final Verdict Waits Wind Test; Putting Chief Complaint.

By BRIAN BELL.

PASADENA, Calif., Dec. 21 (A.P.).—The new golf ball, the only one after January 1, has won its first skirmish with the men who earn their living playing it.

The revised larger and lighter ball was ruled standard equipment for the Pasadena open tournament, and only pellets bearing the mark of 1931 were permitted. Results were favorable to the new model.

However, the final verdict from the professionals will not be returned until a tournament is played when the wind is blowing. The Pasadena tourney was played in calm weather.

The scoring showed no change as a result of a change in balls. There were about the normal number of birdies, just as few eagles, and the run of the mine pars as in days of yore, when the ball was smaller and heavier.

"Rimming the Cup" One Complaint.

The usual division of opinion developed among the players. Some thought they could not putt as well as before, and claims were made that the new ball was "rimming the cup" too much. Golfers seldom agree on any part of the game. However, the consensus was in favor of the oversize ball.

"I don't see that the new ball is any harder to play than the old one," said Walter Hagen, the old master. "Any way, it's here, and it doesn't make any difference what we think about it."

Tommy Armour, Proessional Golf Association champion, spoke up in defense of the latest edition.

"I like it," he said. "My shots through the fairway are better, especially the irons. Yes, it's a pleasure to play it."

No one was surprised to hear that Mortie Dutra, Long Beach, Calif., pro, liked it. He had a round of 69.

"Yes, it's O. K. with me," he said.

Tony Manero Admits Mental Complex.

Tony Mareno, who has played lots of golf in many places, was not prepared to condemn the new ball, but he admitted a mental complex.

"I know it won't go as far as the old one and I have been trying to hit it harder than I should," was his reaction.

Harry Cooper was short with his putts and wondered if it was the fault of the ball or his putter, but Johnny Dawson, who went to the semifinals in the British amateur, said he liked to play it.

Horton Smith's diagnosis awaits confirmation by Prof. Einstein.

"The new ball is harder to putt," said the tall pine transplanted from Missouri to New York. "The weight is not centralized as it was in the old one, and this ball is more apt to rim the cup."

Fellow pros suggested this involved relativity, and it was fortunate perhaps that Einstein was on his way to California.

Duffers See No Difference.

Golf fans who can hit any golf ball, new or old, into a trap or the rough, said they saw little difference in the distance or direction of the ball leaving the players' clubs.

Spectators who have played the Brookside course, scene of the tournament, many times, suggested that the charge of being a bad putting ball was perhaps unjustified. They said the cups were in tricky places on the greens.

Players who participate in tournament golf only by following the stars watched the performance of the new ball with interest. Many of these never will break 100 with any size or weight ball, but they have hopes. All agreed with Hagen, "Anyway, it's here."

V. P. I. Star Improved In Brain Infection Fight

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Optimism over the condition of Henry V. Hooper, Virginia Polytechnic Institute football captain, whose injury has been diagnosed as a brain infection, was expressed today at Johns Hopkins Hospital, where he was brought last week.

Hooper was said to be much better, his pulse, temperature and respiration being normal and his mind clear.

The diagnosis of brain infection was announced yesterday by Dr. Walter E. Dandy. He said this may have resulted from an injury Hooper sustained in the Thanksgiving Day game with Virginia Military Institute, which brought V. P. I., the State championship.

NO one knows how Pegu was lost, nor how such a huge statue could ever be lost, but it was—for 400 years. The figure is 180 feet long and 46 feet high. In 1681, when a railroad was being constructed, engineers found Pegu buried beneath earth and debris, overgrown with vegetation. It has been carefully restored. Giant statue figures are not rare in Burma, for the Buddhist statue makers believed in doing things in a big way, but Pegu is the biggest of their handiwork.

It was a good thing for H. P. Robinson that the Kingston librarians didn't figure up what was due in fines on that 50-year-overdue book! But then he wasn't to blame, for the book came into his possession just recently and he turned it in immediately. It was "Beauties of English History," published in 1840.

The male Norwhal uses its tusk much in the way a stag uses his antlers, and it must be a great show to see two great Norwhals in battle. The true purpose of the tusks hasn't been definitely ascertained, but it is probable that the whale uses them to bore breathing holes through ice.

GOLF'S ELITE MOVES TO MEXICO

Trials for $25,000 Agua Caliente to Start Today.

PASADENA, Calif., Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Golf and St. Nick drew a winter army of professionals and amateurs southward to Agua Caliente today where Leo Diegel will entertain them next month with $25,000 worth of tournament, the richest in the world.

For the present the majority of the divot clan will be concerned with the qualifying trials, which begin tomorrow and end Wednesday. Most of the famous are exempt from the preliminary rounds with the exception of Walter Hagen.

Enter in Two Events.

Agua Caliente, where Diegel is professional, requires qualifying rounds by all except those qualified in the 1930 P. G. A. championship, the low 32 in the National Open, foreign players and prize winners of last year's meet.

Hagen, caught in a long slump, missed all of these opportunities.

Most of those entered in the qualifying rounds and most of those exempt will remain in the Mexican resort to observe Christmas day.

Among those trekking southward solely for Christmas were Diegel, Tommy Armour, Al Espinosa and Tony Manero. Manero captured first prize in the $4,000 Pasadena open, which ended here yesterday. Playing with the new "balloon ball," he shot the 72 holes in 287.

Seasick Idaho Eleven At Hawaii for Game

Sea Island Beach, Ga., Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Gene Tunny, former heavyweight champion, arrived here last night for a visit over the holidays. He was accompanied by his wife.

The former champion is expected to spend two or three days hunting at the Sea Island Hunting Lodge.

6 Western League Clubs Favor Draft

Topeka, Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Dale Gear, president of the Western League, today announced a telegraphic poll of members showed six clubs voting in favor of acceptance of the draft proposal of the major leagues, one not voting and one unheard from. The club not heard from was St. Joseph, a St. Louis Cardinal farm, which Gear said, undoubtedly would favor acceptance.

Action of the Western League, one of the five nondraft leagues, followed that of the American Association in accepting the proposal.

New York Now Center Of Best Amateur Golfers

New York, Dec. 22 (A.P.).—With the passing of Bobby Jones and George Von Elm, the metropolitan district seems to have become the amateur golfing center of the United States.

Within the district now are such figures as George Voigt, Maurice McCarthy, Eugene Homans, T. P. Perkins, Cyril Tolliey and Jess Sweetser. Three of these, Perkins, Tolley and Sweetser are former British amateur champions.

Bobby Jones Signs to Broadcast Weekly for Firm on Golf Topics

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Radio listeners of the Nation soon will have the opportunity of hearing Bobby Jones' own voice telling just how golf shots should be executed. The Atlanta author, motion picture player, lawyer and king of golfdom today confirmed the signing of a contract with a pharmacal company, calling for 26 weekly broadcasts over a Nation-wide hook-up. Starting January 14, he will speak from 8 to 8:15 Eastern standard time every Wednesday night over the network of the National Broadcasting Co.

"This will be my first appearance over the radio," Bobby said. "I hope we all have a lot of fun out of it."

Jones plans to make these short talks educational and entertaining, with the entertainment predominating. He will discuss his various shots and also tell interesting stories about the various tournaments in which he has participated.

Last month, after he completed his conquest for the world's four major golf titles, Bobby made public his retirement from competitive play and announced the signing of a contract to make twelve one-reel educational motion pictures on golf. He is to make these next spring in Hollywood.

For some time Bobby has been an active journalist and author, writing golf articles for newspapers and an occasional magazine article.

But first and last, Bobby is a lawyer, and he has an extensive practice here. Bobby also finds time to serve as a director of the First National Bank and as a vice president of the Atlanta Baseball Club of the Southern Association.

SIX HILLTOP RUNNERS IN DEBUT

O'Reilly Names Group for K. of C. Games January 3.

SIX Georgetown University track athletes will make their season's debut in competition on January 3, in the annual Brooklyn Council, Knights of Columbus indoor games in Brooklyn, N. Y. The six, named yesterday by Coach John D. O'Reilly, veteran Hilltop mentor, are Capt. Victor Burke, John Downing, Jack Mara, Jimmy St. Lawrence, Paul Connelly and Artie Briggs. All five in the metropolitan area and will be at their homes for the Christmas holidays at the time of the meet.

Many Exempt From Qualifying.

Burke, Connelly and Briggs are slated to run in a special 500-yard race, while Downing, Mara and St. Lawrence have entered the 1,000 yards, another special event.

Coach O'Reilly was not enthusiastic in discussing the prospects of his runners, for, as he pointed out, they have not as yet reached the peak of form owing to insufficient practice. The Hilltop track squad has had only two weeks of training on the board track.

Hometown to Honor Stecker, Army Star

West Point, N. Y., Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Cadet Ray Stecker will be just a member of the corps of the Military Academy until tomorrow afternoon, then for nine days he will be the lion of Hazleton, Pa.

Stecker, outstanding ball carrier in Army's late season football campaign, ran 57 yards to beat Navy and contributed the points that beat Illinois. He has a nine-day furlough and his home town will honor him, topping the celebration with a chamber of commerce banquet next Saturday night.

National Aquatic Stars At Shoreham Tonight

With nationally known swimming and diving stars among those present, the Venetian pool of the Shoreham Hotel will open tonight at 8 o'clock in a setting flanked by modernistic lighting and lined by a special dinner dance.

A brilliant coterie of aquatic performers have been brought to Washington for the pool's premiere, including Gertrude Ederle, conqueror of the English Channel; Walter Spence, holder of all breast-stroke speed championships; "Stubby" Kruger, eccentric diver; David Russell, junior national high board champion, and Herman Ringler, rated as one of the best all-around tankmen in the country.

Endowments by Alumni And Abolition of Receipts Declared Impracticable

Dean Nevils of G. U. Says Proposal Is Ideal to Aim For.

President Marvin of G.W. Averse to Asking Endowment.

East Sees "League" as Desirable But Change Not Near.

Columbia U. Head Not to Crusade Actively for Reform.

DR. Nicholas Murray Butler's suggestions for alumni financing of college athletics and organization of a governing body to the League of Nations did not meet altogether favorable reaction in the minds of two local college presidents—Rev. W. Coleman Nevils, S. J., of Georgetown University, and Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, of George Washington University.

The practicability of Dr. Butler's proposal of "an Academic League of Nations" with jurisdiction over college sport was doubted by Father Nevils, while Dr. Marvin could see no reason why alumni should pay for athletics rather than mathematics, Latin or art. Gate receipts would be obolished if Dr. Butler's proposal were adopted.

Georgetown Would Join League.

"I believe an academic league of nations is an ideal to be aimed at," said Father Nevils, "but I doubt if it is practical. If such an organization were effected, however, I think that we would join. In my opinion, the way should be shown by those schools now so heavily supported by large gate receipts."

"There may be a whole lot more behind this subject" stated Dr. Marvin, "than the newspapers have revealed, but concerning that which has been printed I do not feel that there is much to say. I do not favor the suggestion that athletics be supported by endowment by alumni. Why should alumni pay for athletics any more than for mathematics, Latin or art?"

Supporters and Foes Of Butler Plan on Coast

San Francisco, Calif., Dec. 22 (A.P.).—The suggestion of Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, for endowment of college athletics by alumni as a means toward ending the influence of gate receipts, found both supporters and opponents today along the Pacific Coast.

He said "it seems to me the trouble with football is the inability of those connected with it to distinguish between work and play. I am afraid the game rapidly is leaving the realm of play and becoming work, which it should not be."

Prof. William B. Owens, of Stanford University, president of the Pacific Coast Conference, feels that Dr. Butler's proposal merits consideration. "I take it that what Dr. Butler wants to do is to get away from the dependency of other sports on football receipts," Owens said. "Anything that would assure future development of our athletics so that all students could participate in some form of competition, would be splendid.

"I would not limit such endowment to alumni, but would accept it from all available sources. Dr. Butler's suggestion of an academic league of nations does not appear to be the solution and it is doubtful if such an organization would be as effective as our various conferences."

Thomas Putnam, dean of men, at the University of California, does "not believe Dr. Butler's proposal will solve the problem. An academic league of nations does not seem as practicable as the conferences. It would be too unwieldy."

Glenn "Pop" Warner, football coach at Stanford and a veteran of 38 years in the coaching business, said:

"Well, you hear a lot of funny things suggested. I don't think Dr. Butler's suggestion merits any comment."

Skepticism of Proposal Is Expressed in South

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Four prominent Southern University officials were skeptical today of Nicholas Murray Butler's proposal for an "Athletic League of Nations" and its consequent abolishment of football gate receipts in favor of alumni endowments.

Prof. C. L. Hare, of Alabama Polytechnic Institute, president of the Southern Conference, said the Columbia University president's proposals might "solve some of our troubles." He pointed out, however, the school with the largest endowment would be in the same position as the school with the most money now.

"We still would have recruiting and soliciting," he added.

The endowment might place college competition on a higher plane, but would not strike at the heart of the trouble, in the opinion of Chancellor Charles M. Snelling, of the University of Georgia.

"The greatest menace lies in the subsidizing of athletes, while the problem of gate receipts is of secondary importance," he said.

W. A. Alexander, head football coach at Georgia Tech and president of the American Football Coaches Association, observed the plan might be theoretically sound, but he thought it would not be practical.

"If Georgia Tech had to depend on alumni endowment for its athletics, we'd have to abandon all sports now," he said. Alexander was of the opinion the various conferences have enough rules now and that the real problem was in living up to them.

Chancellor James H. Kirkland, of Vanderbilt University, said the suggestion is impractical. It would be impossible to induce the State Legislatures to appropriate money for stadia, so the plan would not work at State colleges.

"In addition," Chancellor Kirkland said, "colleges can not get enough endowment for academic work, much less athletic endeavor."

East Sees Flaw In Idea.

Other prominent university officials in the South failed to see where Dr. Butler's plan would solve all the troubles of the present system. Prof. C. L. Hare, of Alabama Poly, pointed out that the schools with the largest endowments now would replace the schools where the most money was available.

"We still would have recruiting and soliciting," he said.

The suggestion was regarded with favor but considered impracticable among educators and athletic directors of schools in the Rocky Mountain Conference.

League and Endowment Ridiculed in Big Ten

Chicago, Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Such old-timers in college athletics as Amos Alonzo Stagg, of the University of Chicago, and Fielding Yost, of the University of Michigan, found little or nothing to recommend in the plan of President Nicholas Murray Butler, of Columbia University, for an "athletic league of nations" and alumni endowment support of athletics.

Mr. Stagg, serving his thirty-ninth year as athletic director at Chicago, said:

"Personally, I believe athletics should be removed entirely from the influence of alumni bodies. As far as the 'league of nations' idea is concerned, why, we are trying to do just that in the Middle West with this Western Conference."

Yost concluded his brief comment with the statement that "he saw no possible value in the proposal."

President Walter Dill Scott, of Northwestern, treated the proposal lightly.

George Huff, University of Illinois athletic director, made pointed attack on Dr. Butler's proposal, terming it ridiculous.

"It seems ridiculous to me," Huff said, "to suggest endowing a college

Hollingberry Wonders Why Southerners Are Favored.

Cold Marks Arrival at Los Angeles; Tide Due Today.

LOS Angeles, Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Greeted by real football weather with temperature ranging from 34 to 40 degrees, the Washington State gridmen arrive here today for their Rose battle with Alabama New Year's Day.

Coach Wallace Wade confirmed reports he has been interviewed as a prospect to succeed "Nibs" Price at the University of California next year, but said he has declined consideration. He is under contract to report to Duke University next fall.

"What I can't understand," Coach Hollingbery of Washington State said, "is how they figure Alabama a strong favorite down here. Suits me though. My men were never in a better frame of mind for any game this season than this one."

Alabama will set up training quarters at Patterson field, Occidental College, only a few miles from the Rose Bowl.

Although the cold wave was greeted with pleasure by the Washington State players and followers, it was expected to find no favor in Alabama ranks if it continues through the week.

The Cougars will hold two secret drills tomorrow. Coach Hollingbery said he was satisfied with his defense and expected to devote much of the time to offensive tactics.

Ticket sales moved slowly with about 55,000 seats sold but with the teams on hand, graduate manager Earl Foster of Washington State said he expected business to pick up. The Rose Bowl will hold 85,000.

Life's Darkest Moment —By H. T. Webster

Boots and Saddle's

(Reg. U. S. Patent Office)

—Jefferson Park Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

JEFFERSON PARK features an allowance race for 2-year-olds today at 6 furlongs, in which seven are listed to start. Admiral Grayson's BRIGHT COMET has only one danger in the race, JAZ AGE, a recent winner, but it appears the Grayson filly has the better of it. She was second to Chene last out, a week ago, and that race points to her success over JAZ AGE today.

The latter probably will be favorite. She was beaten a length and a half by Our Johnny, and that showing is below the race of BRIGHT COMET against Chene. POLYLITH ran against better horses last out and showed a good effort, but tired in the stretch. It appears that the other juveniles in this race will cut a small figure.

FIRST RACE—The first race also is for 2-year-olds and it appears there will be twelve starters. ZAILA appears best. She was third to Chene in her last start, but in the race previous to that the daughter of Zev fairly ran away from her field, beating Sparrow Hawk and Mardie by five lengths on a heavy track. She is at her best in the mud. FLAGG PORTER, last on the list of eligibles, has a chance to be in the money, but may be shut out of the running. CHEHALIS should be the chief contender against ZAILA. CHEHALIS last out was third to West Virginia, three lengths back, and can do better.

SECOND RACE—PARTICIPATE is selected for the second purse, going back to his last start, when third to Dark Simon. CHAFF is regarded as a dangerous contender on his last race, which Orford won, but by only a nose from CHAFF. The race was run in 1:13 4-5, with the same weight up as in this race. VIRADO may get third money, but he has been running far off his form and showed little last time out. PARTICIPATE is ready and has been scratched twice recently, as if the stable were casting about for the best spot to make sure of a winning.

THIRD RACE—THEO ROCHESTER is in the best spot in the third race he has been placed in during the meeting, and should win. Back in a 6-furlong race, where he belongs, he will only have HIGH SCORE as a dangerous contender, and he should dispose of him. The latter was beaten a length and a half by Elizabeth Bolla Saturday on a heavy track, but is at his best in the mud. THEO ROCHESTER was in a distance race last time out, won by Bozo, but was favorite even at that distance. HERNAN CORTEZ is probably best of the others.

FIFTH RACE—ORMOND BIRD only has to run back to his Maryland form to win the fifth race, which is a mile and 70 yards, his best distance. In his last race at Bowie he met too much speed, the race being won by Light View, but in this field he should go to the front and stay there. COCKRILL has speed, but seems to be off his best form. There was an improvement Saturday, when he was second to FRANK FULLEN, beaten two lengths on a heavy track. He should get the place in this gallop, with FRANK FULLEN taking the show money. The latter is a greatly improved horse, having won his last three races.

SIXTH RACE—TORPOINTER is overdue and should win the sixth race. Most any of his Eastern races would win this, but in his last New Orleans start he trailed Water Fowl and others. CORINNE D. showed a flash of speed in her last start a few days ago, running second to Mona, paying $49 a place. She finished in front of Alma and others. THISTLE MARTY looked as good as any of the others. His race when second to Title Oak was a good one.

SEVENTH RACE—PERFECT ALIBI is again selected and has a weaker field in the seventh race than she has met in some time. Her recent races have been below form, but in her last she was within striking distance, finishing third to Gold Bet. MISS MARYLAND is next best in this field and a very dangerous rival. She was unplaced in her last start, but previous to that race was beaten only a half length by Fair Polly. BRIGHT FLASH may figure in the race.

RACE STABLE OF COCHRAN ON BLOCK

Epithet Expected to Bring $50,000 at Estate Sale.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The thoroughbred racing stable and breeding establishment of the late Gifford A. Cochran will be broken up and dispersed to settle the estate. Epithet, Flying Heels, the Beasel and Polygamous, with the other horses in training, will be sold at auction in the paddock at Belmont Park early in June, when the spring meeting of the Westchester Racing Association is in progress.

Epithet, winner of the Hopeful Stakes last August and the only horse to beat Jamestown, is the ace of the string. Horsemen are of the opinion that he will command $50,000 and more if he trains well and is ready to start in the Belmont Stakes of $70,000, for which he is eligible.

W. A. Porter is authority for the statement that the horses in training, numbering 29 and including those which will be 2-year-olds on January 1, will be offered at Belmont Park ready to race, while the breeding stock of stallions and mares will be sold at Lexington and the coming yearlings at Saratoga Springs next August. Care has been exercised to have the stock offered at times and places best suited to get the best results.

Dartmouth Nine Opens Virginia Home Season

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Dec. 22.—Princeton, Yale, Harvard and Dartmouth will all have places on the University of Virginia basebal schedule for the season of 1931.

Dartmouth opens the diamond card here on March 31. In April there will be two home games with Yale and one with Harvard. The Cavalier nine has two contests with Princeton to be played at Princeton on a trip north.

OLMSTED AT FORT MYER.

The Olmsted Grill five will travel to Fort Myer tonight for a game at 8 o'clock. Grill players will report at the fort at 7:30 o'clock.

Tech, Central Fives To See Action Today

Tech and Central, two of the prime contenders for the high school title, will be seen in action today against St. John's and Hyattsville High, respectively.

The battle with Paully Byrne's team will be the second test of the season for Tech, and the Saints are expected to receive a warm reception at Tech's gymnasium. The game is scheduled for 3:30 o'clock.

Central, well oiled after a light workout yesterday at Woodward, will go out to Hyattsville this afternoon for a game against the high school basket men of that town.

N. C. State Gridders List 1931 Miami Game

Miami, Fla., Dec. 22 (A.P.).—The University of Miami Hurricanes will play North Carolina State, a Southern Conference football team, as the last of their scheduled games here in 1931, Coach Ernie Brett, of the Hurricanes, said today. The encounter will be Miami's first game with a Southern Conference team.

The schedule for 1931 includes seven S. I. A. A. games.

Cumberland Leases Park for Next Season

Special to The Washington Post.

Cumberland, Md., Dec. 22.—Community Baseball, Inc., owner of the Cumberland franchise in the Middle Atlantic League, has renewed the lease for the park for the 1931 season.

With this matter off the hands of the local management, and the nucleus of the team held over on the reserve list, affairs are in better condition than at any time in the history of the club at this period of the year. The Colts will not need any large squad of candidates. Some of the players sent here by the New York Yankees may be returned if a working agreement with the Yanks is again arranged, and this seems most probable.

Cumberland reserved the following players: George Savino, Bill Langer and Frank Spotts, catchers; Frank Chase, William Helmick, Marvin Duke and John Smittle, pitchers; John Byrnes, Joe Conti, August Daviu and Jimmie Jackson, infielders, and Bernard Connell and Donald Thomas, outfielders.

SAKS VISITS ALEXANDRIA.

The Saks Clothiers will invade Alexandria tonight seeking their ninth straight victory in a game with the Alpha Delta Omega five in the Armory Hall, starting at 8:30 o'clock.

TECHNICAL REACTION HITS STOCK MARKET

Half of Last Week's Gains Lost as Wheat Sinks to 64¾ Cents Bushel.

B. & O. DROPS 3 POINTS

New York, Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Most of the financial markets reacted today.

The decline in stocks, although broad and large enough to erase half of last week's gains, was to have been expected in view of the violent rally last week, for obviously the short interest was substantially reduced during the rebound that started on December 17, thus diminishing potential support.

Weakness of July wheat, which broke to 64¾ cents a bushel at Chicago, was a feature of the day's happenings. Corn likewise was heavy and cotton eased. Bonds developed some irregularity.

The share market seemed governed largely by technical considerations rather than by an abrupt return of pessimism. Quotations sagged steadily, with the sole exception of a brief period in the first hour, when copper shares showed a fair degree of firmness concident with a small price increase by custom smelters.

If there were any outstanding soft spots, they were the utility, chemical, farm implement and rail divisions, but other classifications were not far behind and the general net losses ranged from 1 to about 4 points. Numerous specialties lost more extensively.

Easy Money Policy Cited.

Reports that Federal Reserve banking authorities were to make credit still easier early next year lacked confirmation. With a large volume of funds now out of work, it was pointed out that a maintenance of the reserve's easy money policy would probably be of important assistance to the bond market, thereby facilitating loan flotations. At present most of the comparatively small amount of commercial credit sought is obtained through bank loans, but it is known that considerable corporate financing has been held up pending favorable times in the bond market.

The advance of ¼ cent in copper, following increased foreign buying, was accompanied by a firmer tone in silver, zinc and lead. Bar silver here rallied ¾ of a cent an ounce after an advance in London. The other two nonferrous metals were inactive.

Weakness of July wheat — nearer futures in which the Farm Board has been interested held up well—was reflected by pressure against the farm machinery shares, especially J. I. Case which lost 8 points. International harvester made a new low, losing more than 3 points net. There was also conspicuous weakness in Allied Chemical and Postal Telegraph preferred, both off 8, and Auburn Auto, down nearly 10.

Southern Railway Off 4.

Railroad stocks returned to the quotations prevailing before last Friday's upturn. November earnings are unfavorable, so far as they have been reported, although hardly enough are at hand to permit significant comparisons. New York Central and Baltimore & Ohio lost 3. Union Pacific 5, Atchison, Pennsylvania and Missouri-Kansas-Texas 1 to 2, and Southern Railway 4.

Selling of the merchandising issues carried Woolworth, Sears Roebuck, Kroger, Best and Macy about 2 points lower on the average. Among the more active stocks, U. S. Steel, American Can, American Telephone, Standard Oil of New Jersey, International Telephone, Westinghouse, American Smelting, Consolidated Gas, United Corp, and Union Carbide lost 1 to 3. United Cigar preferred, on which dividends have been resumed gained 3 points.

With the exception of the July delivery which closed at 64¾, off 2⅜, Wheat futures finished steady. The Winnipeg and Buenos Aires markets were weak and small export clearances were reported. Corn's losses averaged about 2½ cents, reflecting an increase in the visible supply, favorable weather and lower Argentine prices. Cotton closed 1 to 8 points lower.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Chicago, Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Jolted by an immense reported wheat surplus in Argentina and prospective huge increasement of seeding in Russia, most grains tumbled sharply today. Increased visible supplies of corn gave additional unsteadiness to the corn market. Practically no rallying power in prices developed, and the Liverpool wheat market fell to the bottom-most point reached since 1909, with corn in Chicago the lowest yet this season.

Wheat closed irregular, from the same as Saturday to a setback of 2½ cents. Corn closed heavy, 2⅜ to 2¾ cents down. Oats closed ¼ cent off, and provisions unchanged to 77 cents drop.

Except for prices on old crop domestic wheat, there has virtually been "cornered" by Farm Board allies, all grains plunged downward from the start. A specially bearish circumstance was news that the Winnipeg wheat market had fallen to practically 50 cents a bushel, just about cutting sheer in two the old-time rural standard price of "dollar wheat." Back of this news was confirmation that Argentine government crop estimates pointed to a 1930 exportable wheat surplus of fully 200,000,000 bushels, an amount 120,000,000 bushels more than last season. Unofficial advices said the Argentine government report had been prepared with great care, and that including 25,720,000 bushels carryover of old wheat the Argentine exportable wheat surplus January probably would total 209,000,000 bushels.

Russian advices about the expected enlargement of seeding came from the Department of Agriculture at Washington and were to the effect that Russia will seed 186,807,600 acres of spring wheat, an increase of about 10 per cent over last year. Despite stanch support given in Chicago from Government-sponsored agencies to old crop wheat prices, the new crop represented by the July delivery wheat went whirling headlong to lower levels. House with Eastern connections led the selling of July. Next to no recovery followed announcement that an increase of export business in Canadian wheat had developed on today's price break, although the total export purchases were substantial, 2,000,000 bushels.

Corn suffered worst after notice that the world visible supply showed more than 3,000,000 bushels increase during the last week. Commission selling of corn was general, and demand was restricted largely to traders who were in a position to collect profit. Oats weakened owing to sympathetic pressure from corn.

Buying support for provisions gave out, despite firmness of the hog market.

MIXED TREND RULES BOND PRICE CHANGES

Second Grade Groups, Under Influence of Stocks, Lose Ground.

PRIME ISSUES ARE FIRM

New York, Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Price movement in the bond market became decidedly two-sided today, after steadily forging ahead for three days. Second-grade issues that staged the strongest comeback last week showed a reversal of form, succumbing to the influence of a weak share market. Prime bonds, however, were steady to firm, showing small fractional changes, principally on the upside.

Stock privilege issues were mixed. Railroad issues and speculative industrials were mixed. Railroad convertibles showed good resistance to selling pressure and most of the active group held their recent gains. United States Governments were little changed. Liberty bonds were steady and quiet. There was a large turnover in Treasury 4½s and 4s at two-thirty-seconds under Saturday's closing price.

In bond circles considerable interest was shown in the report that the Federal Reserve will follow a policy in 1931 of making banking funds even more plentiful than they have been this year, which should prove stimulating to bonds and later to the mortgage market. New York Federal Reserve officials declined to comment on the story, but it has been expected in financial circles that the Federal Reserve would continue such a policy.

It is understood that many corporations, notably utilities, have planned bond issues to finance their normal expansion or to purchase supplies but have found market conditions unsatisfactory for several months. Little financing is expected to appear until after the first of the year. Offering will be made tomorrow of a $4,500,000 4½ per cent bond issue of the City of New Orleans.

Railroad bonds that led to the advance last week showed the largest losses today. Among them were St. Paul 5s of 1975 and 2000, off 2; Erie 5s of 1967, off 3¼, and the 5s of 1975, off 4¼; Missouri Pacific general 4s, off 1, and Nickel Plate 4½s C, off 1⅜.

Foreign dollar bonds were irregularly higher. The government obligations of both Latin-American and European countries maintained a firm trend. Municipals and industrials were heavy.

UNIFORM MORTGAGE LAWS BEING URGED

Advantage of Standardized Act in States Explained in Bulletin's Article.

INSURANCE SALES DROP

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

Plans to expedite home ownership through standardization of State mortgage laws are presented by Donald E. Bridigman, of Minneapolis, in the current legislative bulletin of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America. The article is based upon an address which he made recently before a meeting of Chicago mortgage bankers and lawyers describing the provisions of the uniform mortgage act framed by the National Association of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws, for which he acted as draftsman.

An idea of the diversity of mortgage laws may be obtained from the fact that 28 States regard a mortgage as a lien at all times; 4 as a lien until default, and then an estate; 16 as an estate. Twenty-five States give the mortgage right to possession only on foreclosure; six States do so subject to change by agreement between the parties; six States give the mortgagee right to possession on default and nine give him right to possession on execution of the mortgage, subject to stipulation.

Under such conditions, he shows, the flow of funds from one State to another for financing of home and farm ownership is retarded somewhat more than would be the case if mortgage bankers and investors could operate under uniform and simple laws.

Advantages of Act Cited.

The uniform mortgage act, if adopted, he concludes, will simplify mortgages and their foreclosure and make clearer and better titles to land; avoid useless trouble and expense; facilitate the flow of money on mortgage loans and be a great aid in the handling of the enormous mortgage loan business upon which in a large measure prosperity and happiness depend.

Insurance sales in the District during November were 9 per cent behind those of the month a year ago, the monthly bulletin of the Life Insurance Research Sales Bureau, of Hartford, Conn., reveals. November sales in the District aggregated, $5,069,000, and 40 per cent of the companies doing business here reported gains in business. During the past year, the volume of ordinary life insurance paid for in the United States was larger than in every previous year except 1929.

The fourth semiannual income and capital distribution on December 31 to holders of North American Trust Shares, the largest fixed investment trust, will approximate $10,000,000, Distributors Group, Inc., sponsor and national distributor of this trust, in making this announcement today, stated that this amount will be equivalent to $.658 per trust share.

Plan for Reinvestment.

Of this forthcoming distribution, a substantial proportion represents a return of capital and shareholders are extended rights providing for the reinvestment of this capital return in additional North American Trust Shares at a discount of one-half point below the prevailing asked price, this being the concession established to apply during the current reinvestment period, the announcement states. Reinvestment rights will expire with the close of business January 15, 1931.

At the latest meeting of the board of directors of the Bank of Bethesda, the regular semiannual dividend of 3 per cent and an extra dividend of 1 per cent were declared. Both are payable December 31, to stockholders of record December 20.

The board of directors of the Washington Savings Bank at its recent meeting voted a 5 per cent Christmas bonus to its employes and officers.

Canadian Wheat Hits All-Record Low Mark

Winnipeg, Man., Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Confirmation of increased export sales of Canadian wheat, brought grain values back late today from the lowest marks recorded in organized trading. Depressed by weakness at Liverpool and Buenos Aires, wheat collapsed this morning to 50½ cents a bushel for December, but closed at 52¼, a loss of 1½ cents from Saturday. May closed at 54⅜ to 54½. July at 55⅜ to 55½.

Export sales exceeding 2,000,000 bushels were confirmed, and it was learned China had taken 1,000,000 bushels. Trading in cash wheat and coarse grains was slow. Values followed future markets trend.

NEWS OF LATEST HAPPENINGS IN MARYLAND AND VIRGINIA

REPLEVIN HEARING DECISION DELAYED

Suit to Recover Cattle by Prince Georges Man to Be Settled in April.

THREE TEACHERS RESIGN

Decision in a replevin hearing held yesterday by Judge Joseph C. Matingly in Prince Georges County Circuit Court was delayed until April, and the property was ordered held by the defendant, James G. Ballard, in the meantime. The suit was brought by Hilton Torreyson, in an attempt to recover some cattle which were taken over when Mr. Ballard took possession of the farm of Mr. Torreyson's brother, Bernard G. Torreyson.

Mr. Ballard took possession of the Torreyson farm in lieu of foreclosing a mortgage which he held on the property, and this action gave rise to another suit on which hearings were finished yesterday. The Morris Plan Bank, of Washington, had levied on certain tobacco which Mr. Torreyson had on the place to satisfy an unpaid debt. This product was valued at about $1,000.

Mr. Ballard, through his attorney, S. Marvin Peach, then filed suit against Mr. Torreyson and the bank, jointly, to compel the return of the tobacco, which he said was his. Senator Lansdale G. Sasscer appeared for the defendants, Mr. Torreyson and the bank. It is probable that a decision in the tobacco suit will be rendered about the first of the year.

Alleging desertion and cruelty, Clara Arnold, of Fourteenth street near K street northwest, yesterday filed suit for absolute divorce against Vernon G. Arnold, of Mitchellville, Md. She also asks for the custody of their son, Eugene Arnold, 3 years old, and for alimony.

The woman states, through her attorneys, Robert M. McCullough and Thomas J. Duckett, that she and the man were married in 1924, and that he deserted her three years later. Prior to his desertion, she claims, he was abusive.

The resignation of three teachers from the Prince Georges County school system and the appointment of one to fill the vacancy was announced yesterday by Nicholas Orem, county superintendent. The new appointee is Miss Helen Middleton, of Waldorf, who will take the place of Miss Hilda Ward in the Piscataway School. Miss Ward resigned, effective December 31.

The others who are leaving the system are Mrs. Dolores Allen, teacher in the Allentown School, whose resignation is effective January 31, and Miss Philemon McCoy, a teacher in the Maryland Park High School, who will leave January 31.

The school holiday in the county will begin tomorrow, Christmas Eve, and will end on January 5.

Forty cases of Maryland rye whisky, found on the roadside, will make as many Prince Georges homes happy at Christmas, it was learned yesterday on good authority. The contraband, apparently cached when a liquor car broke down, was found under a culvert on the Crain highway near the Pigeon House road.

Those who will benefit by the windfall are workers on one of the county roads, who discovered the whisky by accident yesterday morning. One of the men, finding the cache, notified his fellow workers, and the stock was dismantled. So far as could be learned last night, none of it had been turned over to any law enforcement agency.

Police put the blame for the accident on the Baltimore boulevard which cost one life early yesterday morning on the dead man. This man, William E. Williams, colored, of Baltimore, was killed when the car he was driving struck another one on the road near Muirkirk.

Two passengers in Williams' car were hurt and three in the other machine were injured, one seriously. She is Sadie Lee, of Eighteenth street near H street northwest, who is in Providence Hospital with a fractured skull. Her companions, John Lee, of the same address, and Solomon Easton, of T street near Seventeenth street northwest, were less seriously hurt.

Hilda Biner, colored, of Baltimore, a passenger in the Williams machine, received fractures of both legs, and Mary Miles, colored, received bruises of the left leg and injuries to the eye. All were taken to Casualty Hospital by the Prince Georges rescue squad, while the others were removed to Providence Hospital in a passing auto.

State Policeman John S. Baggett said that the testimony of the survivors convinced him that the accident happened because Williams was too far over on the left of the road. County Policeman Claude Reese, who witnessed the crash, said that both cars were traveling at a high rate of speed.

A hearing on a charge of assault, with intent to kill, and throwing stones at an auto will be held tonight, when Leo Lagana appears before Judge Thomas D. Griffith at Forestville. The charges are made by Elmer N. Windsor, who says that Lagana attempted to shoot him.

The alleged attack is said to have occurred, after a hunting trip, near Lagana's home in Greater Capitol Heights. The shooting is reported to have frightened one woman so that she fainted and was carried to Casualty Hospital under the impression that she had been hit by a bullet.

After the shooting the accused man threw stones at an automobile belonging to Charles J. Craft, of Washington, it is said. Lagana was arrested by State Policeman W. A. Rogers and Constables Fendall Gray and Earle Blackwell. He posted bond of $600.

The Women's Club of Riverdale is sponsoring a Christmas celebration to be held tomorrow night on the lot adjoining the Presbyterian Church, which will be featured by carols by the local school children and music by the Citizens Band of Prince Georges County. All organizations in the town are invited to be present.

Mrs. D. W. Worley is chairman of the committee of the club in charge of the affair. The children's chorus will be led by Prof. L. B. Goodyear, of the University of Maryland, who will also lead the community singing. After the celebration, a chorus from the club and the Christian Endeavor Society of the Presbyterian Church will sing carols at the home of those who are confined to their beds.

Mrs. Mary W. Browning, candidate for county commissioner in the last election, has been reappointed to the Democratic county central committee. Mrs. Browning, who lives in Riverdale, was a member of the committee from 1921 until last fall, when she resigned to enter the lists for commissioner.

She was also a commissioner from 1926 until this month, being appointed to fill a vacancy on the board by Gov. Albert C. Ritchie.

Guion P. Wilson, 67, Died Suddenly Thursday in New Jersey.

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 22—In fulfillment of an oft-expressed desire to be buried in his native city, Annapolis, although his family moved from here when he was an infant, Guion P. THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

THOUGHTS ON CHRISTMAS CARDS.

SELECTING Christmas cards is the order of the day, and you can tell by the irritability everywhere in the air that the folks are hard at it.

• • • •

Nothing seems to be the occasion of more ill feeling, impatience and downright meanness than shopping about for a proper card to convey the spirit of Christian love and benevolence.

• • • •

It is the cause of family wars, and even separations. Husbands and wives fall out over the question of whether to send their friends a white card with a gold camel on it, or a red and green card showing a stage coach drawing up before an illuminated inn. Old friends part over the problem of whether a holly wreath in the upper left-hand corner is preferable to the Three Wise Men in the lower right. And clerks at the stationery counters weaken under the strain of finding "something with a winter scene and some little lambs in it" for querulous old ladies who can't make up their minds.

• • • •

A yuletide card is, after all, something put into the Christmas season to make it harder.

• • • •

The sincerity has been pretty well extracted from the custom. Instead of a pleasurable manifestation of a deep-seated spirit of brotherly and sisterly love it has come to be regarded as just one of midwinter's hard jobs.

• • • •

ONCE it gave the more tender emotions a good December working out, but today it merely gives everybody concerned another excuse for further development of the great American grouch.

• • • •

Christmas card sending in America has become so stiff and formal that the recipients feel the need of an antifreeze solution the moment they open the envelope.

• • • •

Half the people who get cards Christmas morning have to go into a huddle to recall who the senders are. There is nothing better, in fact, than Christmas and New Year's cards for giving you a card index of perfect strangers who have you on their mailing list.

• • • •

And the trouble is that you are expected to collect the addresses and send back a card in exchange. This is not necessary, but it is generally regarded as expedient. After all, he may be a prospective customer, a future client, or somebody whose golf club you may want to join some day.

• • • •

Of course you're perfectly willing to wish any man a merry Christmas. Certainly. But you can't help realizing that a 7-cent card depicting three wandering minstrels singing in the snow, a camel crossing the desert, or a coach full of seventeenth century merrymakers won't be of any great help.

• • • •

However, it's gotta be done. So out with that last year's list, Emma, and let's get it over with, no matter how we hate it.

• • • •

The Reed in the Wind.

"The country's sunk," the brokers say
When stocks are going down;
"Improvement still lies far away,"
They moan about the town.

But, oh, the sudden turn about
When there's some buoyancy;
"The boom is back," they loudly shout,
And kick their legs with glee.

• • • •

AS George Jessel says, "If they sell America any shorter in this market the Indians will buy it back for those beads and $30."

COMMUNITY PARTY SET FOR ARLINGTON

Christmas Giving and Music to Feature Celebration by Veterans Group.

MONARCHS AID NEEDY

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

The community Christmas party will be held tonight under the auspices of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Post 824, at Jefferson District Fire Department Hall, in Virginia Highlands.

The program will begin at 6:30 with a party for all the children of the district by pupils of Nellie Custis and Hume Schools, following which Santa Claus will present the Christmas stockings. Preparations have been made for 250. The welfare committee of the Nellie Custis Parent-Teacher Association, working with the committee of the post, will be in charge. At 7:30 the Gospel Singers of Washington will sing Christmas carols around the lighted community tree on the grounds adjoining the firehouse.

At 8 o'clock the Veterans of Foreign Wars Overseas Band will give a 20-minute concert, followed by moving pictures taken overseas.

Commander John G. Strobel will be master of ceremonies. On Christmas Eve the Santa Claus of the post, accompanied by the committee of the Parent-Teacher Association, will deliver gifts to 50 children in the homes of the unemployed and needy. Individual gifts have been received by the committee for distribution and donations for the work have been made by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Jefferson District Fire Department.

Christmas cheer was brought into the hearts of sixteen unfortunate kiddies, wards of the Arlington County Welfare Board, as they were ushered into the parish hall of St. George's Episcopal Church last night and saw the huge Christmas tree provided by members of the Arlington County Monarch Club.

Surrounded by the members of the club and their families, Dexter Hussey, member of the club, played the part of Santa Claus. He distributed to each child several packages containing toys and later gave them ice cream, candy and cake. Earlier in the afternoon members of the club distributed large baskets filled with food and other good things for Christmas to the families of the children.

Preceding the distribution of the gifts a musical program was given, including piano solos by John Palmer and Mrs. William P. Ames, a recitation by Miss Marion H. Davis and a reading by Frank Davis.

The children were brought to the parish hall under the direction of Mrs. Mae E. Jacobs, superintendent of public welfare of Arlington County.

The United Baptist Sunday School of Cherrydale held its annual Christmas party in the Masonic Temple last night at 8 o'clock.

Preceding the distribution of gifts to the children a program was given, which included the singing of Christmas carols, recitations, and a playlet.

Through the gift of $100 by George D. Horning, Mrs. Mae E. Jacobs announced last night that she will take 50 little children of the county, wards of the welfare department, to Washington, where she will purchase clothing for them. Mrs. Jacobs stated that through the kindness of Leon Arnold a bus has been placed at her disposal for the purpose.

Mrs. Jacobs stated that the gift from Mr. Horning is made each year to her department.

According to an announcement made yesterday by Dr. P. M. Chichester, county health officer, there will be no preschool dental clinics during the month of January. After that date Dr. Chichester stated they will be resumed.

St. George's Episcopal Church at Clarendon will hold Christmas Eve services. Starting at 11:30 o'clock, the chimes will be played by Miss Barbara Smith. A Christmas carol service by the choir will follow. The offertory anthem will be "O Holy Night," by Adams, with a soprano solo by Mrs. C. P. Oliver. The choir, under the direction of Karl Kerr, will sing Stainer's Communion Service during the celebration of the Holy Communion. The floor candelabra to be used for the festival occasions, designed, made and presented by Dilman Marks and Robert Marks, will be dedicated.

Indications are that upland game is going to be in dire need this winter in northern Virginia and other sections of the State as a result of the continued drought, which has affected the natural food supply, and W. Harry Johnson, State game warden, yesterday announced that a food supply contest will be given under the supervision of the State Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries.

There will be two divisions to the contest, the first being competition among individuals, for which prizes aggregating $100 will be awarded, and competition among organizations.

The contest will be judged on the basis of area covered, number of birds fed and the method employed in feeding them.

UNION'S COMPLAINT IS SENT TO POLLARD

TELLS OF 'PROPAGANDA'

Richmond, Va., Dec. 22 (A.P.).—J. Fred Cherry, president of the Virginia Federation of Labor, filed a protest today with Gov. Pollard against what he termed "misuse of the State's military department to spread propaganda emanating from the mill owners in Danville."

Quoting press reports of statements by the acting adjutant general, Samuel G. Waller, that a large percentage of Danville cotton mill strikers would return to work immediatey if they "could be given assurance of protection after the troops leave," Mr. Cherry said Gen. Waller's remarks were inaccurate and constituted "pure propaganda against the strikers."

"The Federation of Labor," he said, "most strenuously protests against the misuse of the State's military department to spread propaganda emanating from the mill owners in Danville."

Accuracy Challenged.

"We challenge the accuracy of Gen. Waller's statement as quoted. We know he could have obtained no such report from the 4,000 strikers themselves. This leaves only one source from which he secured this information.

"Since there are only two sides of this controversy, accurate information must come from one or the other of the disputants. Gen. Waller did not interview any strikers. Newspapers say he did confer with counsel from the mills."

The protest said the Federation of Labor had representatives in Danville December 7 and 14. These men, Cherry said, mingled freely with the strikers, and reported the mill workers "are more determined not to return to work in the mills until their grievances are adjusted than they were at the beginning of the strike."

Hearings will be had before two magistrates tomorrow on 47 eviction notices served by the management of the Riverside and Dan River Mills against strikers' families now occupying mill-owned homes.

Danville, Dec. 22.—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, declined at Washington today to discuss a statement of "tremendous importance," which local union officials say he will make here December 30.

Mediation Suggestion Expected.

Since the meeting is open to the Danville public, the suggestion was heard that he might make a personal appeal to Danville as a community to try to work out a plan of mediation, whereby the strike may be settled. Francis J. Gorman went to Washington to remain in contact there. W. N. Doak, Secretary of Labor, said no progress had been made looking to negotiation through his office.

Arrests in connection with the beating of C. W. McKellar, a nonunion worker, who, with his daughter, was attacked in woods as they were on their way to work December 8, now total fifteen.

A squad of Danville policemen was on hand at Schoolfield this morning when the accused appeared in response to bond citation and rearrested them on city warrants. This means all will be tried here. The fifteen are to be prosecuted in the corporation court, under the Virginia antilynching statute, if indictments are obtained. None went to jail, each being bonded in the sum of $2,500.

The strike situation is expected to undergo no material change between now and Monday, when the plants, which are to close Wednesday evening for the holiday, will reopen.

Girl Attired as Man Held as Bootlegger

Police Chief Says She Offered $200 for Her Freedom.

Winston-Salem, N. C., Dec. 22 (A.P.).—Nattilly togged out in male attire—suit, hat and topcoat—a young woman who, Police Chief George Fontaine, of Kernersville, said, was "the Queen of Virginia's bootleggers," came to grief in that village last night.

She gave her name as Gene Buck, her age as 26 and her home as Peters Creek, near Stuart, Va. In her automobile Chief Fontaine said he found two 5-gallon cans of corn whisky and five 1-gallon tins of apple brandy.

The Kernersville officer said she pulled ten $20 bills from her pocket, thrust them at him and asked to be let go. Instead, she was brought to Winston-Salem, held in jail for the night and released today on bond.

Chief Fontaine said the girl, who always travels alone, dressed as a man, had been running liquor for four years, to his own knowledge.

Physician Happens by And Saves Two Lives

Special to The Washington Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Dec. 22.—Timely chance arrival of a physician who was carrying antidotes probably saved the lives of Miss Margaret Bell, a nurse at the Morgantown Hospital, and her sister, Frances, yesterday, when their car skidded and was wrecked and sulphuric acid from the battery poured over their faces as they lay pinned beneath it near Morgansville.

FAIRFAX GETS BIDS REGARDED AS LOW

Town Council Expects to Save on Water System Construction.

SCHOOLS CLOSE TODAY

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 2324-W-2.

The town council of Fairfax was agreeably surprised yesterday on opening bids for material to be used in the construction of the new municipal water system. The bids were much lower than had been anticipated. It is probable the town will save a large sum on the cost of construction.

The guaranteed bid made the McCreary Engineering Co., of Atlanta was $45,201, which included all materials to be used. Under a special arrangement between the company and town council, the council was to purchase the material which the company guaranteed would not exceed the estimates. The contract for the material will be awarded at the next meeting of the council.

Maj. Thomas B. Chapman said the low bid on the water tank and tower was made by the Chattanooga Boiler and Tank Co., $5,322. The low bid for six and eight-inch pipe, submitted by the Lynchburg Virginia Foundry Co., was $14,807.52. On one and one half-inch pipe, the Virginia Machine and Well Co., of Richmond, bid $1,370.16. On thirty-six valve boxes, the Anniston (Ala.) Foundry Co., bid $125. On forty-two fire hydrants, the Virginia Engineering Co., bid $2,457. On miscellaneous valves, the Columbia Iron Works, Memphis, bid $524.18. On leadite, the Leadite Co., bid $549.70. The bids on one and one-half-inch valves was left open pending arrival of samples.

Contractor Hagman, Vienna, Va., who is drilling the first of two wells, has struck a large body of water at 110 feet, but it is not large enough to give the flow required. The second well will not be sunk until it has been determined how great a flow can be obtained from the first.

Talk persists concerning a probable injunction suit to prevent erection of a water tower and tank on a tract purchased by the town council a month ago. It is said the objection is based on the argument that the tank would mar the beauty of the landscape.

As the citizens who have protested have filed no action, the council is proceeding under the opinion that the difficulty can be adjusted without recourse to the courts.

ALEXANDRIA PLANS CORNERSTONE RITE

SLAYER GETS 4 YEARS

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 823.

The Alexandria Chamber of Commerce, through Dan S. Hollenge, business manager, has received permission from the Treasury Department to arrange for the laying of the cornerstone of the new Postoffice building, in a letter from Seymour Lowman, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, received yesterday.

Mr. Lowman stipulates that whatever arrangements are made shall be entirely without cost to the United States, and that nothing shall be placed on the corner stone except as shown on the full size detail drawings showing the stone, a print of which is in the possession of William Y. Brady, constructing engineer.

The permission is also contingent upon there being no objection on the part of the contractor, and that other responsible organizations wishing to participate shall be permitted to do so. There will be no objection to the placing of a box in the corner stone.

It is expected that the details of the ceremonies will be mapped out in January.

F. Clinton Knight, postmaster of Alexandria for the last eight years, has been reappointed for another term of four years, his new term beginning yesterday. He succeeded the late Dr. William Morgan Smith, being appointed temporary postmaster in October, 1922, and appointed postmaster on December 22, 1922, by President Harding. He was reappointed in 1926 by President Coolidge for four years.

Since taking over the office Mr. Knight has effected many improvements in the service, both the city carrier and the rural free delivery service having been extended and improved. The business of the Alexandria Postoffice has outgrown hte old building, which has been torn down and a much larger building is in course of erection, which will accomodate all the activities of the office, as well as other Government offices.

Fifteen additional employes have been put to work at the city postoff
